ADDITIONAL FROM EUROPE

Arrival of the City of Baltimore.

THE AUSTRIANS IN AUCONA.

Departure of Napoleon III. from France

Later Political and Commercial Intelligence.

The screw steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Rennie, which sailed from Liverpool at about 2 o'clock P. M. on the 11th inst., arrived here yesterday morning.

An abstract of the intelligence she brings has already been received from Cape Race, while the mails by the Vesuvius have supplied details.

We shall, however, the latest dispatches, and the Liverpool commercial advices.

The wife of Dr. SEWARD MOSSMAN (formerly Miss SUSAN CUNNINGHAM) died at Liverpool on the 10th inst.

The London Herald asserts in positive terms that England has no understanding, no arrangement or agreement, written or verbal, expressed or implied, with France or any other country, respecting any combination which may result from the present war.

It is stated that Austria had commenced a confiscation of church property for war purposes, the wealth of the rich monasteries being the only resource left; and that representations had been made at Rome which will prevent such a proceeding being denounced in that quarter.

PARIS, Wednesday, May 11.

The Moniteur of this morning officially announces the appointment of PASQUIER as Ambassador to England.

MOVEMENT OF THE WAR.

DEBARKATION OF THE EMPEROR AT MARSEILLES.

MARSEILLES, Wednesday Evening.

The Emperor arrived here at mid-day and immediately embarked on board the Reine Hortense, where he received the authorities of the city. At 2 P. M. the steamer left the harbor. It is said in Paris that the Emperor expects to be in Milan by end of the month or beginning of June at latest.

On the London Stock Exchange, according to the Times, the continued suspense between the hostile forces excites each day new conjectures, and the fact that Prince WIRDSCHGRÄTZ having been dispatched from Vienna to make, according to rumor, concession to Russia, which in the eyes of some diplomatists can mean nothing else than a consent to allow her to do what she pleases in European Turkey, has also been a subject of comment.

The Times corrects its statement of yesterday respecting coal freights for the Mediterranean. It appears that the present rate is not more than 25s.@30s. The ports for which they have been mostly chartered are Marseilles, Toulon, Algiers, Bonastarri, Cagliari and Corfu. There is still a demand for steamers for this purpose.

Marshal CANROBERT has addressed an order of the day from his head-quarters at Alessandria to the troops under his command. It concludes as follows: Soldiers! the precipitate march which you have just made across the Alps has not allowed the solicitude of the Emperor's Government to supply with all which you stand in need of. You will soon receive it. You must call to mind that the warriors, our forefathers, who have preceded us in these fine countries were in want of everything at the time that they covered the flag of France and the country with immortal glory. The great French army will soon find itself opposite the Austrian army. They are old acquaintances. Both have seen each other at Lodi, at Arcoli, at Marengo, and at Wagram. Illustrious names, which you will soon come to be followed by others equally glorious.

The recent arrival of a considerable fleet of overdue vessels may place a large number of seamen at the disposal of the naval authorities.

THE ENGLISH AND CONTINENTAL MARKETS.

BY TELEGRAPH TO QUEENSTOWN.

LONDON, Thursday, May 12.

Consols opened steady at closing prices of yesterday, 91¾@¾, advanced to 92 buyers, and are now firm at 91⅞@92⅛, very little doing. Sales very inactive, but have improved a little in price, and are firm in tone. Canadians, no change. French improved upon higher quotations from Paris. Rents closed £61 1-25, or about ⅛ ⅌ cent. better.

1 P. M.—Consols, Money, 92⅛; for account, 91⅞@92⅛; New Three Per Cents, 91¾.

From the City Article of the Daily News.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.—The investments of the public have slackened, now that the temptation is diminished by the rise. Few alterations took place to-day, and the closing quotations of Consols were ⅛@¼ per cent. over those of yesterday. A favorable effect has been produced by the check to the drain of gold.

In the other department of the Stock Exchange the tendency of prices was generally satisfactory. In the foreign market the demand was moderate, high rates being still demanded for long-dated paper. According to advices from Paris the subscriptions to the French loan of 20,000,000f. have already exceeded 40,000,000f., including a very large number for only 10 francs, say 8s. of annual income. Everybody in any way connected with the Government is expected to take part in this new national demonstration.

From St. Petersburg Exchange came firmer, quotations being 33¼. A painful impression was introduced into the Stock Exchange by the announcement that six-men more individuals, all dealers in Consols, have this day ceased to be members of the establishment. This was the precise form of the proclamation, the formal declaration as defaulters being under the circumstances dispensed with. The names comprise those parties who were compelled at the monthly settlement in Consols last, to compromise with their creditors, and who were allowed till this day to settle all claims.

From the City Article of the London Times.

The English Funds have again been dull to-day, but without any important movement, and there has been little general business. All the discount houses are disposed to receive no further amounts at all, owing to the extreme difficulty in finding employment for them for short periods on good security. The failure was notified on the Stock Exchange this (Wednesday) evening of seventeen members. It is said the dividends will average about 10s. in the £1. The Bank of Belgium has raised its rate of discount from 3 to 4 per cent.

The recent rise in Russian produce has been followed by a considerable reaction, and hemp has fallen 4 per cent. The sugar market retains a drooping tendency. An extraordinary degree of activity continues to prevail in the leather market, and prices are still rising.

The Daily News reports that in Mark-lane yesterday English wheat met with a slow sale at a reduction of 2s. to 3s. per quarter from that quoted on Monday. Some of the best assets of ARSTEIN'S banking-house at Vienna, amounting to £400,000, have, it is stated, been found pledged to the National Bank.

The London and N. W. Railway traffic returns show this week an increase of £200.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, May 11.

COTTON—The market on Saturday assumed a more buoyant tone and became more active. On Monday, there was increased activity, and prices were generally quoted 3-16d.@¼d. higher. On Tuesday, there was a rather quieter feeling, but prices were maintained. Sales of the three days, 27,000 bales, including some 3,000 on speculation and 2,000 for export. Messrs. CLARK & JONES quote middling Orleans at 6¾d.@7d., and middling uplands, 6¾d. There has been a great influx of Cotton-laden ships since the departure of the Canada. At Manchester, an improved feeling is manifested, but business is quite limited. BREADSTUFFS—Messrs. RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co. report that the reaction has been general throughout the country. Here FLOUR is offered at 6d.@9d. decline, ⅛ central, without sales. WHEAT is offered at a like reduction, without buyers. INDIAN CORN neglected, and 6d. cheaper. The following quotations are more or less nominal: Flour, 11s.@14s. 6d.; Red Western Wheat, 7s. 6d.@10s. 6d.; White, 10s.@11s.; Southern, 10s. 6d.@12s.; Mixed Corn, 5s. 3d.@5s. 6d.; Yellow, 5s. 6d.@7s.; White, 7s. 6d.@8s. 6d. PROVISIONS—Pork, the sentiment has entirely disappeared, and not a single transaction is reported. In Pork, also, there is nothing doing. Bacon dull, but unchanged. LARD in better inquiry, at 60s.@61s. for Prime, and 61s.@62s. for Extra. TALLOW rather firmer; Butchers' Association quoted at 67s. 6d., but there is none on the market. PRODUCE—RICE, Common, under arrivals, has declined to 4s. ASHES firm, for Pots, at 31s. 6d.@32s.; Pearls quiet, at 31s. 6d. BEEF dull, but unaltered. SUGAR quiet. COFFEE inactive. RICE firm, at full prices, but closes quiet. LINSEED OIL sells at 38s. 6d.@39s. SPIRITS TURPENTINE firm, but quiet, at 44s.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET—MAY 12.

Market quiet at about ¼ above last Friday's. Sales probably about 5,000 bales. Imports 30,466; previously 287,700 bales.

THE AUSTRIAN TREATIES WITH ITALY.

From the London Times.

We have at length the opportunity of perusing, and, if we please, fixing in our memories, the Treaties by which Austria so firmly bound to herself the smaller States of the Italian Peninsula. But the study has lost its attractions, for at the very moment we are invited to commence it the state of things which these Treaties were intended to perpetuate has crumbled into dust. There has been no noise, no tumult, no outrage. Everything has been managed quietly, decorously, and even politely. The Grand Duke of Tuscany has been hewed out of his beautiful palace with the unanimous assent of his soldiers, his people, and even his servants, and is left in peace to thread the wild pass which crosses the Apennines on his way to Vienna. A plan was, indeed, drawn out for the bombardment of the mutinous city, but the troops entirely refused to dip their hands in the blood of their fellow-subjects, and as we rejoice to think the beautiful cathedral and noble churches of Florence, and its unrivalled treasures of statuary and paintings, have been saved from the doom to which their departing Prince had devoted them. It seems futile to enter into a comparison between things utterly incommensurate, but we should like to be told by some admirer of the statu quo in Italy, how many Grand Dukes such as Florence has known them since the destruction of her liberties, three hundred years ago, are equivalent to one of the pictures of the Pitti Gallery, or one of the glorious statues of MICHAEL ANGELO. It is curious to see how strongly the Treaty of the 12th of June, 1815, has provided against the very things which have just so quietly taken place. The first article declares a perpetual alliance between Austria and Tuscany, for the purpose of mutual defence and the maintenance of the external and internal tranquillity of Italy. By the second article, the Emperor and Grand Duke guarantee to each other their Italian dominions. By the fourth, Austria agrees, when a casus foederis arises, to supply 30,000, and Tuscany 6,000 troops, the whole to be under the command of an Austrian general.

Let us now turn for a moment to the Treaty between Austria and Modena, dated the 24th of December, 1847, which, like the Tuscan Treaty of 1815, bears the signature of Prince METTERNICH. The first article binds each party, upon the request of the other, to give assistance against any attack from without. The second states that the dominions of the Duke of MODENA enter henceforward into the line of defence of the Italian Provinces of Austria, and concedes to the Emperor of Austria the right of marching troops into Modena and of occupying its fortresses whenever the interest of their common defence or of military precaution shall require. The third article shows a considerable advance beyond the views of 1815. Should circumstances occur leading to the belief that tranquillity and legal order are likely to be disturbed, or when such turbulent movements shall have risen to the height of an insurrection which the Modenese Government cannot repress, the Emperor promises to lend every military assistance necessary to the maintenance and reëstablishment of tranquillity and legal order. There is a treaty, concluded on the 17th of February, 1848, between Austria and Parma, just one week before the outbreak of the Revolution in Paris, precisely to the same effect.

We have been thus particular in stating these treaties, because it is right that Europe should understand the species of conspiracy by crowned heads against the rights and liberties of mankind which they contain. Whatever be the cause, however gross the tyranny, however flagrant the misgovernment, Austria binds herself resolutely to interfere. She does not even leave to herself any discretion, but undertakes, at whatever hazard and against whatever odds, to support the Powers that be against the just and well-founded indignation of their subjects. She does not exact from those Powers, to whom she offers an absolute immunity and impunity of iniquity, the slightest guarantee that they will respect the feelings and rights of their subjects. She cannot even imagine to herself that right could be on any other side than that of legal and constituted authority; and a case which she cannot imagine she, of course, does not provide for. Austria has, in fact, hitherto occupied in Italy a position somewhat similar to that which England held in Hindostan,—a position which we confess we have always felt to be utterly indefensible. We have often placed on the throne of little men for whose character and conduct we had no assurance, and whom we effectually guaranteed against the natural results of their cruelty and oppression. We took no security for their good government, and we diminished the chances of obtaining it by making it just as safe to govern ill as to govern well. Thus, our power and our influence have been made the means of protecting and perpetuating abuses in these protected States which we should not for a moment have thought of tolerating in our own dominions. Harsh and irritating as the Government of Lombardy and Venetia may have been to the upper classes, we believe it to have been equity and justice itself compared with the abuses that were practiced in the protected States, and for which Austria was really responsible, because they could not have been perpetrated without her assistance. In Tuscany and in Parma this detestable system is virtually at an end, never, we trust, to be revived. It is only just to Austria to say that she was willing to lay these Treaties before the Congress to which she had assented, and from which she, of course, could expect no other result than the utter overthrow of this craftily devised plan of extending her sovereignty beyond her own frontier by means of stipulations for the right of entry and the exercise of protection. A State which solemnly agrees that its territory may be entered and its fortresses occupied at the will and pleasure of a foreign Government, is a Sovereign State only in name. It has no independence left, and no right to masquerade in the guise of that which it has long ceased to be. There were two ways in which a remedy might come. Either these States might be incorporated with the dominions of the Emperor of Austria, and become ostensibly that which they are actually, or they might disregard the Treaties, which bind only their Governments, and claim a real instead of a nominal independence. They have taken the latter course, and, whatever be his opinion as to the causes of the present war, whatever his jealousy of the designs of the Emperor of the French, every true Englishman must wish that this movement may be crowned with complete success.

All we ask for the Italian States is the right to be let alone—the right to govern themselves according to their own will and pleasure, and to settle those accounts with their rulers which England and France have so frequently and so sharply balanced with theirs. We want to have it broadly admitted that by being Italian, and by being small in population and area, those States have not lost the inalienable right to freedom and self-government, and that any Treaty made in violation of those rights sins against the very first principles of legal and social order. We commend this view not merely to the Emperor of Austria, who has guaranteed, but to the Emperor of the French, who has overthrown these Governments. The first hours of a revolution are always a time of hope and triumph, for they are employed in overthrowing that which everybody detests, but its later days are too often employed in building up a tyranny more odious than that which it has overthrown, and in forging fetters heavier than those which it has shivered. May Italy for once escape this only too probable fate, and may those who make her soil the battle-field of their selfish ambitions show at last that they have learned to respect a people which has proved that in the flush of triumph and the excitement of liberation it knows how to respect itself!

THE RUSSO-FRENCH TREATY.

The Courrier de Dimanche publishes a letter from St. Petersburgh, dated 30th of April, which tends to confirm the announcement of the Times relative to a secret treaty concluded between the Emperor ALEXANDER and the Emperor NAPOLEON. It contains some other curious details respecting Russian policy. The following is an extract:

"Russia desired war and is delighted with it. But that has not prevented her from professing the most pacific sentiments. She has succeeded so far as to be able to say, 'It was I who proposed the assembling of a Congress, which infallibly would have produced peace.' The Russian Government would have been much disappointed, not to use a stronger term, if the war (which result is almost impossible) should become fixed to Italy; it would be the ruin of all her plans. That does not prevent the Cabinet of St. Petersburg from proclaiming in the highest places the wishes she daily expresses in her communications with the European Cabinets in favor of preserving the Continent from a general war. But the attitude of the German States has somewhat deranged Russian diplomacy. The Emperor ALEXANDER has concluded a convention with the Emperor NAPOLEON, by the terms of which Russia engages to concentrate an army of observation on the Austro-German frontier. What is an army of observation on the frontiers of a State but a menace against that State, and a warning given to it to be prepared for an invasion on that side? If the concentration of an army on the Austro-German frontier has not that signification would the Emperor NAPOLEON have endeavored to obtain it by a written convention? Such are the questions pressingly demanded of the Russian Cabinet simultaneously from Vienna, Berlin and the various German Courts. Prince GORTSCHAKOFF assumes a bold front, but he has not succeeded in convincing anybody that Russia in signing that convention had solely in view the defence of her own empire. 'Was it for the French Government to stipulate for the security of the Russian Empire in a pact with the Russian Cabinet?' asked a Minister of the German Courts of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF; to which question the Prince replied by again expatiating on the efforts made by Russia to preserve the peace of Europe. It is beyond doubt that, independently of the utility the Russian Government sees in reserving her action until the moment when the respective situation of each State shall be more clearly developed, the most cogent reason for the hesitation of the St. Petersburgh Cabinet is the not less excessive reserve with which the Prince Regent of Prussia is proceeding in this question. The Cabinet of Berlin is still feeling its way; it has not yet declared that it will engage in such or such a course, but it is preparing for every contingency. I am assured that a very active correspondence has been carried on, not only between the two Cabinets but even between the Prince REGENT and the Emperor ALEXANDER. I am in a position to state that Prince GORTSCHAKOFF has been informed from Berlin even more than from London of the anger exhibited by the English Government on receiving the news of the signature of a convention between France and Russia. I must further tell you that Russia at the moment I am writing is playing a double part. On the one side she is concentrating two armies, conformably to the convention—one on the frontiers of Galicia, the other on the Vistula, and further a third corps, in pursuance of a supplementary or tacit convention, in Bessarabia. On the other hand, she is leading her diplomatic agents abroad with instructions to persuade the Courts to which they are accredited of her pacific disposition, and of her firm desire not to deviate from an expectant position until her own interests and her own security shall be menaced."

THE TREATY OF 1815 AND THE WAR.

From the London Jewish Chronicle.

It is said, that the Austrians stand on legal ground; it is the treaty of 1815 which they defend. To this England was a party. This is another of those fallacies so frequently employed for perverting truth and rendering simple matters complicated. We will not now examine whether any congress has the right of exchanging and bartering away nations, as an American planter does his human chattels, without ever asking their consentment. We will take it for granted they have. Well, has this treaty been kept by any of the contracting parties? It is true that every Power appealed to this treaty whenever it suited its interest, but it is equally true that every Power in its turn, in practice, disregarded it when it could gain more by the repudiation than the recognition. It is true that the separation of Belgium from Holland was sanctioned by the European Powers. But what Congress permitted the Czar NICHOLAS the destruction of the separate existence of the kingdom of Poland, established and guaranteed by the treaty of Vienna? Did Austria not repudiate the contract, now so solemnly appealed to, when she annexed the free city of Cracow, established by the treaty of Vienna, and guaranteed by all the contracting Powers? Did not England at the time protest against this act of spoliation, and does it clearly declare that it was against the faith of treaties? And does not the Emperor NICHOLAS reign in Paris despite that treaty, which excluded his family forever from the French throne? When each party in its turn has so flagrantly violated the contract is it not hypocrisy to appeal to it, as though any of the Powers did still recognize it? Austria, who, by her connivance at the overthrow of the Kingdom of Poland, and the confiscation of the free city of Cracow, has shown how little she respected the faith of treaties when there was no Power ready to enforce them, has certainly no right now to appeal to them, and has in this respect no more claims on English sympathy than has the raven in the fable, when deseathed by the fox of its ill-gotten booty. It may suit a few tories, with a hankering after despotism in their hearts, to cry up the rights of the Treaty of 1815, but the common-sense view of the matter is that the breach of a contract by one party releases the other from any reciprocal obligation. King VICTOR EMANUEL, if he has the power, has just as much right to wrest the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom from the grasp of Austria, as Austria had to annex the free and independent republic of Cracow to her own dominion. It is not the extent of territory confiscated, it is the extinction of the independence of a State, recognized by the treaty of Vienna, which constitutes its violation. We have in these considerations not taken into account the will of the nation. But when a people, like the Italians, groan under the mitrule of a foreign Power, when there, years after a change of dynasty which shall usher in a new order of things, it is not for us Englishmen, who are indebted for our national greatness to a change of dynasty, and to a new order of things thus established, who shed torrents of blood and exhausted countless treasure in the defence of the position taken up, to refuse them our sympathy on the ground of the existence of treaties, repeatedly violated and trampled under foot like waste paper.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

AUSTRIAN VESSELS IN SARDINIAN AND FRENCH PORTS.

The following is the article of the Piedmontese Gazette, making public the decision of the Government relative to Austrian vessels in Sardinian ports:

"His Majesty's Government would have willingly, during the present war, proclaimed those liberal principles, according to which the mercantile vessels of the enemy are allowed a certain space of time to leave the ports of the State without molestation. The Government has been unable to do so, because the territory of the State is invaded by a powerful army, which oppresses the occupied provinces with acts of violence of every description, thus disobeying both the rules of the law of nations and those of humanity recognized in our present state of civilization. Orders have therefore been given to lay an embargo on the Austrian vessels lying in the ports of the State. This measure of precaution and security was imperiously called for by circumstances. And although the enormous requisitions and extortions of all kinds practiced by the enemy on our territory, to the injury of the unarmed population, justify even now an order of capture of the said vessels, nevertheless the Government still reserves its decision in that respect. Meanwhile the Government hastens to notify to all whom it may concern that the property of neutrals that may be on board the sequestrated vessels shall be immediately restored to their owners, conformably to the declarations in favor of neutrals signed by the high Powers at the Congress of Paris in 1856. The application of such principles can naturally only be invoked in the case of such vessels as shall scrupulously observe strict neutrality."

We read in the Semaphore of Marseilles: "Sixteen Austrian vessels are at this moment in our port. Their captains and crews have learned with satisfaction the decision of the Emperor of the French, which accords to them a delay of six weeks to return to the ports of their native country, or to neutral ports. Some of the captains had already made preparations for their immediate departure."

THE MERCHANT-SHIPS OF GERMANY.

In a Hamburg letter, dated Friday last, we read: "Is the possibility of the armies of Germany being called upon, sooner or later, to take an active part in the war against France, our Senate has deemed it prudent to beg, through our Minister at London, the English Government to take under its protection the numerous merchant-vessels which sail on every sea, with the flag of the three ports and free Hanseatic cities. The official reply has not been long coming. Lord MALMESBURY has informed our Senate that if the Germanic Confederation should, by the turn of events, be brought into a war against France, England would not be able, by any international treaty, to take under the protection of her fleets the merchant-vessels of the German States forming part of the Confederation. This resolution of the English Government, which became known to-day at our Bourse, has caused a profound sensation amongst the shipowners."

ENGLISH SHIPS IN FRENCH SERVICE.

It is asserted that the English Government has permitted the freighting of English merchantmen for the military service of France in the Mediterranean.

Incidents and Anecdotes of the War.

Count GYULAI, the Austrian Generalissimo, is a Hungarian by birth, and sees active service in Italy for the first time. In fact, he has never been in the field at all. His father, who died in 1831, did once cover the retreat of Archduke CHARLES in 1809, and did it badly; but as to the son, born in 1805, (says a correspondent,) his only chance of smelling powder was in the Hungarian war of 1848, when, being a native of Pesth, he was not entrusted with any command, and merely watched over the naval arsenal at Pola. 'Tis true he has been War Minister some years, but he never marshaled a battalion under fire.

A French journal announces that M. NICHOLAS CLARY, who is in possession of an income of 300,000f. a year, has engaged as a private soldier in a cavalry regiment which is about to take the field.

Prince NICHOLAS, of Nassau, has taken leave of the Chambers, prior to leaving for the Austrian army. In his farewell speech he congratulated himself on being the first German prince who took up arms "for the defence of the common country."

The Hereditary Grand Duke of Tuscany has resolved to enter the Austrian army, and to serve in the war. He is already nominally colonel of the Eighth Dragoons.

The intention of the Duke of Chartres to serve in the Piedmontese army has been overruled by the advice of the Orleans princes, his uncles, and he is about to leave Turin for England.

An enrolment of Italians under General MONTANARA is going on just now at Paris, to the great joy of the police, who had to look after their political motions, and there is a prospect of no more refugees being found henceforth in Paris, most of them being from the Roman States.

The probable movements of His Holiness, the Pope, in the event of Rome becoming too hot for a pleasant residence, form the subject of much speculation. The Espana, of Madrid, publishes a telegram received from the Spanish Ambassador at Rome, intimating the wish of Pio Nono to take refuge or permanent residence in the Isle of Minorca, and inviting the Spanish Government to send a body-guard of 10,000 men to Port Mahon. The Pope has been there once before, when becalmed on his voyage from Genoa to Valparaiso, and took a fancy then to this Balearic island, which, all things considered, would be a very central and highly independent seat of spiritual authority, his flock being mostly on the shores of the Mediterranean. La Patrie, however, contradicts the Ambassador's dispatch.

La Patrie having announced, on the 9th, that the Count de Chambord and the Duke de Levis had had a private audience of the Emperor of Austria, the Duke has addressed a letter to that journal, in which he says: "I am astonished that in announcing the visit made by the Count de Chambord to the Emperor of Austria, you should have thought yourself enabled, especially at the present moment, to dispense with mentioning the circumstance that gave it a motive. I hasten to repair this omission. The Count de Chambord not wishing to reside any longer in Austria, because she is at war with his father-land, felt it a duty before taking his departure, and from motives of good-breeding which will be everywhere understood, particularly in France, to pay a visit to the Sovereign of a country in which he had received hospitality during long years of exile."

A Paris letter-writer says of Mr. Russel, the Times correspondent: "I mark that the Illustrated News speaks of the recall from India of William Russell, with the view of acting in Lombardy as war correspondent. From what has taken place at Turin concerning the Press, and from the now known determination of the French staff, neither Mr. Russell nor any other Fabyrkus or Kenophon will be telegraphed on this side of the Po, and unless Austria is sure of getting her own version of the war into the Times (a point I avoid touching on,) there is no chance of Gen. Gyulai patronizing a reporter. The Crimea was too far off for much damage to result from minute details of strategetic movements or projects being made public property; but in these telegraphic times, and so near Vienna, London publicity is strongly deprecated. Even at Toulon and Marseilles the particulars of the embarking process, and the specification of the expeditionary force is not allowed to figure in the local journals; and much reserve is perceptible in the Paris papers."

A trooper in the streets of Lyons has missed his way, and was clamorous to be shown the route de Vienne. On being told that the branch down the Rhone to Vienne in Dauphiné did not lead to Chambery, "'Tis to Vienna on Autriche I want to go! Where's the road by Marengo?"

A Paris letter says that the Zouaves of the Guard have delighted the crowds in Paris by the rapidity of their movements. One of them was running the other day towards the railway. "Stop, coward, stop," cried some of the spectators. "You seem in a hurry." "A little, old fellow," said the Zouave. "But where off to so fast?" "Off, to the Congress, gobbies!" was the reply.

At Marseilles a Zouave, imitating the cry of the railway guards, shouted to his comrades, "Passengers for Austria—this way." Another, at the moment when the vessel was quitting the quay, called out to his brother, "My address—Poste Restante, Vienna."

The following anecdotes are also current:

As some Zouaves were returning to their barracks the other day they fell in with some German mechanics, who were shouting zealously a German drinking song. They ceased their vociferations on seeing the Zouaves take up a warlike position and send forward a spokesman. "Messieurs, you are Germans; you can't deny it. Everyone can't enjoy the honor of being a Frenchman." "Well, suppose we are," replied one of them. "Well, you admit it. Now, perhaps, you will let us know if there is an Austrian amongst you." A German came forward, "Yes, I am an Austrian; now what have you got to say?" "Got to say?" said the bellicose Zouave, "I should like to know whether you have ever been at Milan?" "Yes, I was in garrison there." "Then," said the Zouave, politely, "perhaps you will be good enough to give us the address of some public house in the city where we can get good wine, for we expect to be quartered there shortly." The dialogue which had so bellicose a commencement terminated peacefully and jocosely, but it may be that these were some of those true words which are frequently let fall in jest.

As another illustration of the feeling of the army, let me describe to you a lesson in sword exercise in the cavalry barracks at Versailles. A cavalry-man recruit was put sword in hand, and ordered to hack away at a dummy figure stuffed with straw, representing, of course, an Austrian soldier. The sergeant showed the neophyte soldier how to split the skull, to lop off the arm, and slash the Austrian's face. "But can't you show me how to parry the enemy's thrusts?" inquired the recruit. "You need not trouble yourself about that," said the sergeant, twirling his moustache; "that is the Austrian's affair.

The allowance granted to the French soldiers is not sumptuous. A recent letter says: "Speaking of the army pay, it is not amiss to mention that the allowance for the keep of French soldiers is six sous for two meals a day. Some of our friends in England seem to think that these gallant fellows are fed on Pâté de foie gras, or, at any rate, that the barrack cooking is quite artistic and delicious. Now, the fact is simply this: French soldiers in garrison have, every day of their lives, two basins of soup with the stringe in it, which they call meat, and perhaps a few bits of onion or vegetable by way of giving it a flavor; besides this, each man has 1½ lb. of coarse bread—nothing more. When on service they have a little wine; but otherwise, except on grand occasions, such as review, they have none, nor any spirits, beer, or coffee."

A Paris letter has the following: "NAPOLEON III. will insist on the delivery from the KAISERLICH vault at Vienna of the coffin that holds the Duc DE REICHSTADT, and, in case of refusal, that French troops will go and fetch it. To-day's Figaro, which is known to be an unrecognized channel of what the authorities wish to convey, actually says that the young Austrian Emperor is the offspring of the Duke DE REICHSTADT! an assertion which, in time of peace, Baron HUBNER could not tolerate, for the honor of the Archduchess SOPHIA. FRANCOIS ascribes to a still less-suspected personage the maternity of TOM JONES."

It says: "Ships, which three days before the sailing of the Persia, on the 30th ult., could not procure more than 35 shillings per ton for return freight from India, were taken up on the 29th at £3. The ships Crowe Point and Isaac H. Beardman, on their passage from Liverpool to India, were chartered in London, the former from Calcutta to England, with an assorted cargo, at £3 7s. per ton, and the latter from Rangoon to England, with a cargo of rice, at £3 per ton. Both these vessels belong to Newburyport."

New Measures of the President of Paraguay—Already Dodging the Treaty—An Item in the Secret History of the Negotiation—Interesting from Buenos Ayres.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BUENOS AYRES, Wednesday, March 30, 1859.

The Mission Bowlin is producing its natural effects in Paraguay. The Despot, feeling more than ever secure, since the praises and satisfaction displayed towards him by none less than an American Minister, is fast turning into a tiger, and, as I have already informed you, daily gloats his vengeance upon the best of the land. His steamer—one of the elements of progress, according to Judge BOWLIN; according to wiser men one of his elements of oppression and robbery—has arrived here again. I have the file of his Semanario de Avisos before me. The first thing which strikes my eyes is one of those decrees which LOPEZ calls law, and by the emission of which, whenever he has the fancy, he laughs to derision all real law, and each and singular of the rights of man. The one which I translate as follows, will prove to the worst caviler—aye, even to Judge BOWLIN himself—that his treaty, his pacifically made treaty, is worth exactly zero; and a perusal of the said decree ought to prevent the ratification of the treaty by the United States Senate. It ought even to prevent Mr. BUCHANAN, unless a long impunity in iniquity and sin has rendered him shameless in his old age—has made him forgetful of that unknown country towards whose bourne he is so rapidly traveling, and the fearful account which he must balance when he gets there—from sending it to the Senate for ratification. The only decent thing which remains for our President to do, is to reprobate the whole Bowlin Mission and try it over again.

DECREE.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF PARAGUAY AGREES TO AND DECREES.

ARTICLE I. The Judges of Peace comprehended in the capital shall form lists by name of all natives and foreigners who may be found in their respective districts without a known occupation, which proportions to them a decent livelihood.

ART. II. The same Justices of the Peace shall watch in person, as well as by their policemen, every suspicious reunion in any one of the houses of their respective districts, at all hours of the night as well as the day.

ART. III. The Captain of the Fort and his employes shall keep an exact account of the crews of foreign vessels on their arrival to know whether the same crews return in those vessels, or whether some individuals remain here, for what cause, and with what object.

ART. 4. Every foreigner who enters into the Republic with the intention to reside in it more or less time, without introducing any capital or fixed business, shall accredit the lawfulness of his arrival in the Police Office, as also the means of subsistence by some useful occupation which he may bring with him; or, if he pleases, he is free to place himself in the service of some neighboring inhabitant, with previous advice to the Police, WITHOUT WHICH REQUISITE HE SHALL NOT BE ADMITTED.

ART. 5. The Captain of the Fort shall bear in mind that the crew lists must not include any sailor who, no matter from what cause, might remain on shore, leaving the vessel to which he belonged, and said sailor shall be informed that he must take out his passport at the Police Office, to enable him to leave the country.

ART. 6. An account shall be given to the Government every fifteen days of the fulfillment of this decree.

CARLOS ANTONIO LOPEZ.

ASUNCION, Feb. 22, 1859.

It is well that your readers should remark, that this decree was promulgated eight days after Judge BOWLIN left Paraguay, and but few more AFTER LOPEZ ratified the BOWLIN treaty, allowing Americans to enter freely into Paraguay, BUT subjected to the same RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES WHICH THE NATIVES POSSESS!!! They will, however, remark, that by an excess of Bragadocia cynicism, it is dated on Washington's birth-day, which he knew it was the intention of General URQUIZA and Judge BOWLIN to celebrate with double patriotism, (?) on account of the honorable peace made by THEM, with Paraguay.

Article IV., of this decree, is particularly recommended to the attention of the United States Senate, as a positive proof that the whole decree is only intended to drive away from Paraguay, notwithstanding treaties, ALL FOREIGNERS, and leave US now every element of production, or consumption, or navigation, in the exclusive hands of the universally-monopolizing merchant-President.

Now that Mr. BOWLIN has left us, and that all the invading squadron are gone, we can consider with more calmness the secrets historic of this Mission. I care not what were the instructions given to Judge BOWLIN, so long as he was backed by a large force with which to carry them out. He allowed himself to be completely deceived, like a cock, by the elements of despotism, which surrounded him in Montevideo and Paraná. With them, as an American minister, he fraternized, refusing to hear of, or learn from, those other elements of progress which are to be found here, and with which all American interests are intimately allied. He was Urquiza's no measures; he wanted to take him up with him in the Fulton from Paraná; and, if it had not been for the opposition of Admiral Saunders, he would have done so! Here and there to have treated him à la Boyd at Tristan. Failing in this, the Fulton left Paraná before the arrival of Lopez's steamer, which was due in a few hours. But the Fulton, being much swifter than the Paraguayan Salto de Guayra, would beat her up to Paraguay. She was, therefore, run at full speed upon a bank in the river by her native pilot, where its channel has not changed for years, and she was the only one of the squadron so grounded. There she lay three days, time enough to allow URQUIZA, the machinating President-Minister, to pass her by without recognition, and arrive first in Paraguay. Once there, URQUIZA did all the diplomacy; he held frequent interviews with each of the dissident parties, and arranged with Mr. BOWLIN the terms of the satisfaction to be given to the United States. BOWLIN was unwise to imagine that URQUIZA was his friend, and not the friend of his cousin-german blood and education, and brother tyrant, LOPEZ, of Paraguay. URQUIZA told LOPEZ that BOWLIN had instructions not to go to war for money. That is all LOPEZ cares about. Only let him give satisfaction to the United States for insults, and the robber-acts of the same President will be left to a Commission of Arbitration. BOWLIN could not perceive the entire independence of his position. The extraordinary stir in the diplomatic world was no sign of the times for him. Ignorant alike of the language and the country, its history and present politics, he sought not to learn anything, except what his dear friend, URQUIZA, put into his head. Why, Mr. Editor, there never was such a diplomatic chance in the world, nor was there ever such diplomatic ineptitude—such a perfect and disgraceful defeat. Whence the rush of diplomatists to Paraguay? Because the downfall of LOPEZ, which was inevitable, would have destroyed forever the reign of tyranny and robber-rascality, in the region of the Plata. Why have the monarchs of Europe recognized the tyrant of France? For the same reason, "a fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind." They must sustain him or down they go themselves, to that perdition which is awaiting them. If Judge BOWLIN had shown even far less firmness than the passionate mother requires to punish her refractory child, he would have procured in full the moderate demand of the American reclamation.

Our election took place here last Sunday. The Government list was unanimously elected. The Opposition, which represents the party of PARANAMA, of Montevideo, URQUIZA and LOPEZ, and the elements of despotism, robbery and blood, wherever they are to be found, did not even nominate its candidates; the reason, because they would have been obliged to vote for themselves, or else—die still-born. Thus have the friends of Mr. BOWLIN been treated in Buenos Ayres, when the United States, its Constitution and laws, and principles of liberty are the north-star of the rising generation.

The exports of this port for the past year have been $15,000,000. Its yearly treasury receipts $5,000,000; whilst the whole Confederation of URQUIZA foots up $2,000,000. The quotas of the public debt which Buenos Ayres created by loans during the administration of RIVADAVIA, for the purpose of conquering Spain in the upper provinces, and which debt she nobly assumed entire, are regularly paid, and it now stands in London 88@90c. on the dollar.

In addition to the noble act of the subscription in our squadron for the French sailor who blew off his arm whilst saluting our Admiral, and of which I informed you at the time, I have to note another act of courage on the part of our Navy, but of which you may have already heard. During a violent gale of wind at Montevideo—and it does blow severe there sometimes—a coasting schooner was swamped a considerable distance from the port. The three survivors of her crew gained the mast-head, expecting momentary death. French, English, Brazilian, Spanish, and American men-of-war were at anchor in the roads. None moved save the fearless American tar. To Lieut. JAMES GILLIS, a youngster belonging to the store-ship Supply, belongs the honor of saving three poor Italians from a watery grave; and when he called for volunteers among the liberty-men on shore from our ship, he was nobly seconded. In an hour or two he landed with his prize, captured from the cormorant grasp of the Rio de la Plata, and amidst the shouts of thousands, who dared not do likewise. Send his name around and let it be honored as he deserves, and as it has been in the newspapers of this city.

I learn that the wife of the quarter-master, SAMUEL CRANY, I believe, who was killed in the attack on the Water Witch by the Paraguay fort of Itapiru, had two sons in the expedition; fine lads, who promise to serve their country with the same firmness and loyalty as their father. What a pity Judge BOWLIN does not belong to the same breed! May the $10,000 which LOPEZ has paid to the widow, be some assistance to her, though it can never heal the wounds which the tyrant has made in the heart's best affection.

Interesting Developments—Mormon Outrages—Condition of the Territory.

We have received files of Salt Lake City papers to 20th April. The Valley Tan, (KIMB ANDERSON'S Anti-Mormon publication,) of April 19, publishes a number of affidavits of parties who have endured maltreatment from the Mormons. This evidence confirms the previous reports of the Mormon outrages, and gives full particulars of the events of which but meagre accounts have hitherto been received.

On the 20th March, Mr. EPHRAIM F. WARREN made affidavit before Judge DRAPER to the following effect:

I am twenty-seven years old; I came to Utah in the year 1852; I came from Iowa to this Territory; I resided in the town of Springville, Utah County, when I came into this valley, and have resided there ever since with the exception of about seven months absence in California, in the years 1856 and 1857; I resided at Springville now I am my way home from California in the Spring of 1857, I heard of the murder of the two Parrishes and Potter; the day I arrived at Springville I saw the place where they were murdered; seeing the place and the appearance of blood, I became convinced; excited and spoke very vociferously of the cowardly men of Springville; however, after my excitement my mind subsided; my family; I did not say much to anybody; subsequently I was arrested, during the whole season. I have not spoken disposed of my property, and get away; I was very much excited against the men in the neighborhood by the circumstances, but I did not use much caution; I was thrown of my guard by supposing that they dare not touch me. [On the night of the 31st of August, 1857, witness was roused from sleep by two strangers, Wm. Johnson and Oliver McBride, and ordered to go out of his house. He found six other men in the street. What followed is narrated by himself. They were all armed with pistols, knives and guns. Earl told me to be still and go with them out of the city gate. I told them I would not go one step without the knowledge of the public. Earl cursed me by the throat; saying: "D—n your old heart, if you speak another loud word (applying his knife to my throat) I will cut your throat on the spot." Very soon Johnson and Earl—took me by the arms and drag me on the ground most of the time for some many rods, through the gate; they took south through orchards, and come some said "there is some one coming;" "—n him, stop him, stop him!" two ran back and the other six threw me into a fence-ditch. Earl then threatened me by the throat, saying, "You d—d old Mormon, you shall never write to Brigham anymore about people that have been murdered." They then all but one left me, and held a private conversation on the other side of the road, lasting perhaps an hour; then six of them came back, and EARL said: "We have concluded to let you live a few days, if you will now swear before me that you will never divulge what has been done to you to-night to any person, and go, within a day or two, and settle up your affairs, as all men in these valleys have now got to be—d." We have declared war against the whole world, and at any time we can put you aside very easily. I did promise that I would go and settle my affairs, as they required. They then all addressed me, and by me, advised me to make friends with the Mormons, never to write any more, or try to make myself as one of the Gentiles. They then left me.

Another witness, residing in Springville, made affidavit on the 21st of April, as follows:

I have lived in Springville since 1853; was there at the time the Parrishes and Potter were murdered; had a conversation a short time before the murder with Moses Daily, Jr., he said that they had been ordered never to let the Parrishes go out of Springville or the Territory. Said he called on me to join them; I told him I would not; that I did no such jobs; he then said, for God's sake, not to tell of it; he said the orders were from Orson Hyde; Orson Hyde had just been preaching at Springville.

On the 18 April, some remarkable developments in relation to the PARRISH murders were brought out in a confession of ARMAN DURRAN. Durran was a Mormon who seems to have been delegated by the Mormon Bishops to dog the steps of the PARRISH family, and give information of their movements to the Church authorities. He swears that he was notified to attend a Council held by the Bishop, at Springville, in January, 1857, and that on that occasion the plot against the PARRISHES was arranged. The subsequent events are narrated in the confession:

"Bishop Johnson presided. There was something mysterious at this meeting about the Parrishes, that they were going to leave the Territory; the Bishop said there were some demands against them, for debts that they were owing, he did not state the debts. If was mentioned either by the Bishop or McDonald, I dont recollect which, to have some one to find out when the Parrishes were going to start; they wanted a person to know when the Parrishes were going to leave. My name (Abraham Durfee) was mentioned, and I objected to it; then Bishop mentioned Potter's name; and then the Bishop decided that both Potter and myself should try and learn when the Parrishes were going to leave the Territory. The Bishop said he did not wish any one to decline when they were called upon; I then told the Bishop that I would do as well as I knew how, and Potter assented to the same; I cant recollect that Potter made any reply. Parrish the next day told me that he had given up all hopes of getting his horses, that they were gone. Parrish told me that he had seen the Bishop, and he agreed to have the horses that had been found at Bullock's Fork, brought back and put into the cemetery of Cyrus Wentworth, the constable of Parrish, after this had transpired in regard to the horses, proposed leaving right away; he wanted to know if Potter said he would go too. Parrish made arrangements to start, I think it was the Saturday before the murder; I cant recollect the day exactly; Potter told me before this, a day or two, that they aimed to bring them, the Parrishes back, if they started, and I went to Parrish's the next Sunday morning, and they had not gone yet. Parrish told me then that he had expected to have started the evening before, but the police watched the house so closely that he could not go out of doors. Parrish said he walked to go that day, or that evening, but he said he could not get his things out so as to start in day time. We got into the State road and traveled south; and when I came to Dry Creek or Dry Hollow, I spoke for Potter, I hollered out; Potter answered; we traveled on until we came near the house, and I called Puff again; I think twice. I heard some one speak, but I could not tell by the voice who it was; it was a very low sound. Just as the person spoke there was a gun fired near the corner of the fence; the ball hit Benson Parrish. I and the two Parrish boys were walking together abreast. I was near the fence, and Orrin was next to me, and Benson was outside near the middle of the wagon track. Benson was west of myself and Orrin, and the shot came from the southeast; the shot struck Benson and he fell; I sprang back to the right and Orrin passed behind me; I spoke out at the time, but I don't recollect the words I said. Benson made some noise after he fell; the first groan came from the fence, and I started to the west into the hollow, where it crosses the street; Orrin started back north. While I was in the hollow, I saw some one who started after Orrin; this person sprang from the fence just as I was going to the hollow, as he came into the street partly on the run, he shot; from the flash of the gun it appeared to be pointed north. This person called me; he said, "Durfee, you need not be afraid; it was all right." He started then right on towards the city. I got over the fence into the same field; we came out, and I went back north towards the city; I went into the city through the south gate. William Bird, after I met him, went right into the Bishop's house; Bird's clothes were some bloody. I don't know what went on the balance of the evening. Bird washed the blood off his clothes, and he and Wilber Earl went away soon, together, from the Bishop's. I saw the blood on Bird's clothes; William Bird told me, a short time afterwards, that he was called on by Potter to go out there with him, and to do this deed that had been committed; he did not tell me who was with him, but Potter and himself. When Orrin and I started, he said he came out from the fence and shot; he said he saw me, or he supposed it was me, when I ran into the hollow; he asked me if I heard him call for me, I told him I did; he wanted to know why I did not come to him; I told him I did not like to, that I did not know what it meant in regard to their shooting.

The next morning after the murder I heard Bishop Johnson and Bird talking together, and he blamed Potter and Bird for not going further away with them; the Bishop said he wanted I should be satisfied about the affair, and not tell who was in it, that if I did they would serve me the same way; I did not know that the Parrishes were to be killed; I supposed from what Potter told me that they were to be brought back. In the council meeting which I attended Bishop Johnson said there were some of them that would see the blood run.

Judge CRADLEBAUGH had made the following entry on the docket, upon the final adjournment of his Court at Provo:

"This Court has sought diligently and faithfully to do its duty, to administer the laws of the United States and of this Territory. It could not have any other object. But at every turn it has had to encounter difficulties and embarrassments. Men high in authority in the Mormon Church, as well as men holding civil authority under the Territorial Government, have conspired to obstruct the course of public justice and to cripple the earnest efforts of the Court.

The whole community presents a united and organized opposition to the proper administration of justice. Every art and every expedient have been employed to screen an last several crimes committed by Mormons. Witnesses have been prevented by threats of violence from obeying the summons of this Court; others that have testified, have been driven to seek safety in the protection of the small detachment of United States troops stationed near here, who, it is proper to say, are here on my requisition, and for whose presence the Court is responsible. The absolute necessity of having those troops here has been fully demonstrated by all that has transpired during the session of the Court. To crown all, the Grand Jury, sworn to perform a high public duty, hesitated itself an willing instrument to this organized opposition to the laws of the country, and refused to meet the obligations. A most willing facilitation has been manifested to prosecute Indians and other persons not Mormons for their offence, while Mormon murderers and thieves are allowed to go unmolested. This Court determined, as its action manifests, that it will not be used by this community for its protection alone, but that it will do justice to all, or it will do nothing. Not being able to do this, the Court now adjourns without day.

The Deseret News (Mormon) reports that there is destitution at Camp Floyd. It says:

Reports well authenticated, represent that at Camp Floyd, many of the discharged teamsters and employes that came into the Territory with the army, and in the service of Russell, Majors & Waddell, contractors, are in a state of destitution, and that a few weeks since, a company of one hundred or more went in a body to the Quartermaster, and demanded relief, in some shape, which was extended by cutting them to cutting wood at fifty cents per cord.

Business in the Territory was active. Several trains of merchandise have arrived during the last two or three weeks from California, by the Southern route.

Most of the goods brought into the Territory last year were selected by persons who knew very little about the capacity of the country and the people here, consequently a large amount of the importation was unsuitable, and those articles wanted most were seen disposed of without supplying the demand.

To supply the market, resource was had to importation from California, and considerable quantities have been bought in San Francisco, by merchants and others in this Territory during the winter, some of which has come to hand and the balance is on the way.

There was a report, which lacks confirmation, that Governor CUMMING had ordered out the Territorial Militia, to oppose the entrance of the Federal troops to arrest parties charged with high crimes. It was stated that General Johnston had obeyed the requisition of Judge CRADLEBAUGH, by sending two regiments from Camp Floyd, and had a collision between the troops and the Militia was apprehended.

INTERESTING FROM SONORA.

Progress of the Revolution—Statement of Pesquiera—His Address before the Capture of Mazatlan—Contrast Condition of the Country—Miscellaneous News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TUCSON, A. T., Sunday, May 1, 1859.

Again Sonora is a scene of turmoil and confusion—the success of PESQUIERA in taking Mazatlan has so elated his friends that they hardly know what they are about. The good fortune of PESQUIERA, in capturing the principal port on the Pacific coast, gives his present position a permanency, which, with the success of the Liberal Party at Vera Cruz, will for a long time deter all attacks from the Church Party. The possession of Mazatlan gives the Liberal Party at least $100,000 of revenue, which they much needed; with that he can easily fill up his army, and march south until he unites with the Constitutional forces from the City of Mexico.

Many Americans are leaving Sonora, fearing personal violence; this grows out of the fact that GARMANA, although at the head of the Church Party, has uniformly treated them and all other foreigners with great kindness. PESQUIERA, however, is at the head of the party who, on the Atlantic coast and at the City of Mexico, have uniformly extended to the foreign population protection, as well as facilities for business.

As soon as confidence is restored, Americans will again resume business in Sonora, and the foreign mercantile commerce importing. At present there is no merchandise in Sonora. It is hoped that American merchandise will soon be imported in this part of Mexico. For many years none but English and French goods have been sold, and the entire trade has been in the hands of the representatives of those nations.

I have translated the address of Gov. PESQUIERA before the capture of Mazatlan, with his description of the engagement. Gen. GARMANA had as usual left before the fighting commenced:

The Governor of the States of Sonora and Sinaloa, Commander-in-Chief of the Western Division, to the troops under him:

COMPATRIOTS, FELLOW-SOLDIERS: The hour has come in which I shall make good the promise I made when raising the siege of Mazatlan, on the 1st of last February. We will now return to it, prepared and inspired by the glorious victory gained by you at Los Biembres. I am with you to entirely finish with the faction (party) which hopes to escape punishment behind their parapets, and who cowardly and inhumanly has sacrificed those that harmonize with us in sentiments and principles, thinking thereby to instil terror in our breasts. Soldiers! Victors of De Noria and Los Biembres! you who in Sonora and Durango, Chihuahua and Jalisco, have been gathering so many laurels; who have been so signally protected by the hand of Providence; who, far from being dispirited by reverses, have rallied by land and sea; in battles and skirmishes the same—it is you who will give the finishing blow to the dying reactionary party that now is hiding like the criminal before avenging justice. Soldiers of freedom! the arm of divine justice, the justice of the nation, are you; that mighty arm which strikes, not caring for resistance, not measuring the obstacles; caring little for walls and cannon, and, despising the enemy, annihilates them with lightning rapidity, to gain the grand object—the freedom of the people! Citizens! let us do our duty, fulfill our mission. In drawing from behind their breastworks, their hiding-places, these miserable satellites of darkness. Chastise them in the name of the law they have outraged, the liberty they have attempted to enchain, and for daring to trample upon the rights of the people without shame. Let us take that place which until now has been the focus of evils suffered by the Western States, and which we will convert into a fertilizing source instead. In the name of the Constitutional Government, let us take that key so necessary to the independence and freedom of four great States; this city from which, I hope, new armies will rise to defeat the Reactionists in the very heart of the Republic.

To arms! worthy people of Sonora and Sinaloa! of Chihuahua and Durango! the memory of past deeds of yours, and a slight effort, will be crowned with victory. Your price will be, that handsome city—which, if not yet ours, is only not so because we have not yet made the attempt to take it. The hour has come at last! Have confidence in your chiefs, who so many times have led you to victory; have faith in the sacred cause which we defend.

To-morrow Mazatlan, the second port of the Republic, will pay obedience to the Constitutional Government! To-morrow the sun of Liberty shall shine upon the banners of our warlike battalions! To-morrow, after victory, and after showing your moderation for the conquered, and your respect for the lives and property of the peaceable residents, let us embrace and repeat: "Mazatlan, the last bulwark of Tyranny, is ours!" Then return to your homes, to your families, to enjoy the glory which we have earned together.

Soldiers of the West! a long life to the Republic! to the Constitution of 1857! Down with the Reactionists! Down with the forts of Mazatlan! Freedom forever! IGNACIO PESQUIERA.

CAMP OF THE CAMANONES, 2d April, 1859.

True to the word, Mazatlan was taken, after some severe fighting, on the 3d of April, when the following was issued:

MAZATLAN, 3d April, 1859.

Republic of Mexico, Government of Sonora, and Provisionale of Sinaloa.

ORDERS:

The western Military Division, under command of the Constitutional Governor of Sonora, and Sinaloa, has, after over three hours' terrible fighting, taken possession of this important place, this morning, at a quarter past six, and has again added to its laurels by its valor and constancy in defending the Constitution of the country.

The Government will soon give the detail of the memorable action fought to-day with the Reactionists of this port, and for the present only states that the place was defended by 900 men and 22 pieces of artillery, with important fortifications, plenty of stores and munitions of war; that it was taken by storm [assault], and that all the forts and stores, &c., &c., fell into our hands. The enemy lost a large number in dead, wounded, and prisoners, some of which are officers of high rank and distinction. The loss of the Government, although considerable, has been less than that of the enemy, and small, if we take in consideration the resistance of the enemy while storming the eight fortified points—fortified according to all the rules of war, and defended by a bravery worthy a better cause.

In giving this account to your Honor, of the heroic assault of Mazatlan, in order to transmit the same to the people of your district, I have also the satisfaction to announce to you that the Constitutional laws have been restablished in Sinaloa; and, our efforts being crowned with the most happy success, the Government will be able soon to carry out its promises made to the people of both States, for their sacrifices in the beginning of the campaign—in the midst of difficulties, but ever prosecuted with glory and fortune, and to the benefit to the cause of the people.

MANUEL MONTEVERTTE, Secretary.

To the Prefect of the District of Hermosillo.

It has always been the misfortune of the Church Party to have a general who was "inclined to live to fight another day." Governor GARMANA is never with his army. At present it is supposed he is on his way to San Francisco.

The present treaty with the Apache Indians is destined to give us much trouble. It is only a question of time when these thieving, treacherous, and murdering Indians are to be whipped out. No confidence is placed in any treaty, by those who know anything about them.

Whenever our Government again places the Indian Department under the charge of the Secretary of War, and make experienced army officers Indian Agents, we may hope for safety from depredations.

Our Indian agents may be good men, but are mostly unacquainted with Indian character, and are often for peace when they should be for war, as they are fresh from hearing the cry of the residents of the old States, "Lo! the poor Indian." Army officers know their habits and customs, and if they have no confidence in a treaty being kept, are in a position to enforce it.

Since the late treaty, a Mr. BURZ, in the employ of the Overland Mail Company, as teamster, was attacked by a party of Tonto Apaches, a short distance below "Murderer's Grave" station, and so severely wounded that it is thought he will not recover. He received three arrows in his back, from the effect of which he fell immediately. The wagon he was driving and the mules, were captured. The conductor also states that between Sutton's Ranche and Murderer's Grave station, the stage horses were suddenly startled by the snapping of a percussion cap, or the flash of a flint-lock gun, from the brush on the roadside, and so frightened that they ran away, without however doing any damage.

Several days since a party of Apaches visited the Patagonia mine, demanding provisions. They drove off the Mexicans, but committed no further depredations. As a result, the Mexican authorities decline making any efforts to rescue stolen property, asserting that the inhabitants of Sonora were constantly plundered by Indians from American territory, and the booty frequently purchased by Americans themselves. There is justice and truth in this reasoning, and our people will undoubtedly pay dear enough for their temporary security from Apache forays, which they facilitate partially by allowing the Indians to rob the inhabitants of Sonora! The people of Sonora are denied the privilege of pursuit into Indian territory, and left, therefore, unprotected, defenceless, unless they maintain a force of regular thoroughly manned at great expense, stationed along that frontier to prevent our Indians from stealing their property.

With such a condition of things we shall lose much property by Mexicans than Indians, and with far less chance of regaining it. E.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF MRS. SHERIDAN MUSPRATT, FORMERLY MISS SUSAN CUSHMAN.—Liverpool papers of the 11th May announce the death in that city, on the preceding day, of MRS. SHERIDAN MUSPRATT, née SUSAN CUSHMAN. MRS. MUSPRATT was a younger sister of Miss CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN, by whom she was introduced to the life of an actress. The sisters appeared on the stage together in the United States, some years before the first visit of the elder to England, and divided the public favor. Miss CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN often yielded the principal female characters to her sister, whose grace and beauty fitted her to sustain them, and herself assumed the masculine parts. CHARLOTTE left this country for England in 1845, and was followed by SUSAN in the following year. The sisters acted together at the Haymarket and in the chief provincial towns of Great Britain, especially gaining reputation by their performances of Romeo and Juliet—Miss SUSAN CUSHMAN sustaining the latter character. This lady's theatrical career, however, came to a sudden end. In the year 1846 she married Dr. JAMES SHERIDAN MUSPRATT, a distinguished chemist, of Liverpool, and retired from the stage to private life. She resided in Liverpool, and died in that city suddenly from the effects of a cold. The Liverpool Post says:

DEATH OF THE ARCHDUKE FRANCIS-CHARLES, OF AUSTRIA.—A telegram from Vienna, May 11, briefly announces the death of the Archduke FRANCIS-CHARLES, father of the Emperor of Austria. The deceased Archduke was in his 57th year; born Dec. 7, 1802; son of the Emperor FRANCIS I. and MARIE THERESE, his second wife. On the abdication of the throne of Austria by the Emperor FERDINAND in 1848, the Archduke renounced the succession in favor of his youngest son, FRANCIS JOSEPH, the present Emperor, (act of Dec. 2, 1848.) Since that period the Archduke has led a quiet life. He never made any marked demonstration. He was proprietaire of the Fifty-second Austrian Regiment of Infantry and chief of the Third Russian Grenadiers. He had three other sons besides the reigning Emperor.

THE ARTIST LESLIE.—The following notice of Mr. LESLIE, the artist, whose death we announced yesterday, appears in the London correspondence of the Manchester Guardian:

"I learn with great regret—which will be shared by all your art-loving readers—the death of poor LESLIE, the Royal Academician. It did not need the evidence of a failing power in his last works on the walls of this year's Academy Exhibition, to warn his friends that the end was not far off. He has for some time past suffered from organic disease of the heart, and he never recovered the shock caused by the recent death of a favorite daughter. LESLIE was universally liked and respected; of a simple, innocent, truthful and modest nature; loving his art deeply, (within that range of it which it was given him to compass) practicing it conscientiously and unerringly; always accessible to young men, and generous to rising talents. He has given us some of the most charming pictures of graceful and homely humor that has been painted in this generation, impressed with the unmistakable stamp of a gentle and Christian character. I do not think any notable man has passed away from among the living of whom it might be said with more truth that he leaves not an enemy behind him."

Major Samuel Dill died at Camillus, Onondaga County, in this State, May 1, aged 91. During the Revolutionary war, he held the commission of Major in the New-York Infantry, and had command at Sackett's Harbor, and the northern frontier from the St. Lawrence to Niagara. Generals Jacob Brown and Winfield Scott served under deceased at one time, as Lieutenants. He resigned his commission in 1811, returned to Rome, commenced the practice of law, and was appointed first Judge of Oneida County. He removed to Auburn in 1812, and served as Commissary during the remainder of the War of 1812.

The Right Rev. Michael Portier, Catholic Bishop of the Diocese of Alabama and Florida, died at Mobile on the 4th May. He was a native of Lyons, France, and came to the United States in 1819, and was ordained Bishop in 1826. The Mobile Register says: "He was the founder of the flourishing Catholic College at Spring Hill, of the Convent or Academy of Visitation, and of the free schools now taught by the "Christian Brothers." It is to him that our Catholic residents are indebted for the magnificent Cathedral that now adorns the city."

The last Utah papers notice the decease of two Mormon women, who had followed the fortunes of the "Saints" through much tribulation. One of them, Mrs. Alice Martin, was baptised in England, in 1837, by Heber C. Kimball; went to Nauvoo in the first emigration, and, when the Mormons were expelled from Illinois, went with them till they reached Utah, where she died at the age of 43. Another, Mrs. Charlotte A. Hardy, came from Nottinghamshire, England; left her husband there to preach Mormonism, and went alone to Utah in 1854. The devotion of the Mormons to their faith is certainly remarkable.

The inventor of lucifer matches, Mr. John Walker, Chemist, died at Stockton, Eng., early in May, at the age of 79 years. Mr. Walker made the discovery of the use of "lucifers" several years ago while experimenting with various chemical substances, and for a considerable time he realized a handsome income from the sale of his matches in boxes at 1s. 6d. each.

Scottish papers announce the death of Principal Lee, at the University of Edinburgh. He was one of the few survivors of the old race of Scotch divines and scholars; was elected to the Principalship of the University in 1840, and in 1846 was installed in the chair of Divinity, holding both offices at the time of his death. His age was 80.

When Miss CUSHMAN heard of her sister's illness, she hastened from Rome, and arrived in time to join with her other relatives in affording to the deceased such melancholy consolation as could be supplied by the presence of those she most loved.

Sir Arthur Aston, K. C. B., formerly British Secretary of Legation at Rio Janeiro, and afterwards at Paris, and Minister Plenipotentiary at Madrid from 1846 to 1849, died in Cheshire, England, early in May, aged 61.

The Rev. S. A. Worcester, who resided as a Missionary among the Cherokee Indians, died recently at the Cherokee settlements west of Arkansas. He had labored in that field upwards of forty years.

Dr. Tomlinson Fort, formerly Member of Congress from Georgia, died at Milledgeville on the 16th May, aged 73. He was largely concerned in the Railroad enterprises of the State.

The Hon. Wilson Hemningway, formerly Secretary of State of Mississippi, died recently in Carroll County, in that State.

Monsignor Gentili, Bishop of Pisaro, has just died, aged 66.

A letter from Aden, April 18, announces the arrival at that place of the African explorers, Messrs. Burton and Speke. The letter states that they were both very much worn out with their toilsome journeyings. It is to be hoped that the results of their extraordinary expedition to Central Africa will soon be made public. They penetrated into the country about 700 miles from the coast, and surveyed the famous lake of Uniamedi, and several other lakes in the same longitude. Their researches tend, in some degree, to dispel the doubts which have so long hung over the sources of the Nile. The travelers saw no snow on their route, neither do they appear to have heard of any; nevertheless, they are by no means certain that it may not be found on the Kilimanjaro Mountains.

A letter from Constantinople states that the Brothers Godard, the aeronauts, lately had narrow escapes from becoming the victims of popular fury in that city, in consequence of their having postponed an ascension, to witness which a large number of persons had assembled. The weather was so boisterous, that an attempt to ascend would have been attended with imminent danger. At the announcement of the postponement, the rage of some of the persons became so furious that two attempts were made to stab one of the Brothers; and it was only by the utmost exertions of the Police, aided by several English, French, and Germans, that they could be extricated from the hands of the Turks.

The following anecdote of the Queen of Spain is floating about: As the Queen, on Good Friday, was, according to custom, washing the feet of some poor old women, her Majesty's bracelet fell off, and one of the women, picking it up, offered it to her Majesty. "My good woman," said the Queen, "since the bracelet has fallen near you, keep it." Of course the woman was profuse in her expressions of gratitude. The Duchess de Medina Coeli, who was present, told the old woman that she would buy the bracelet from her, and a jeweller having estimated it to worth 17,000 reals, (£4,250,) the Duchess gave that sum.

Miss Dorothea Dix has just visited the Mississippi State Hospital for the Insane, and writes her impressions. She finds a lamentable lack of the beneficial and appeals to the charitable for relief. The condition of affairs is described as follows: "The institution has no philosophical instruments; no well-chosen libraries; and no illustrated periodicals—the dull monotony of the walls is not relieved by pictures and engravings; we have games which only increase the tingling of the tangled in attention, and which disturb the tranquil in silence and diffuse a cheerful spirit."

Ex-Governor Dimitrios Ypsilanti, who was one of the most active and prominent leaders of the Greek party in the Revolution, and for years a member of the Hellenic Legislature, and for years a member of the Hellenic Senate, died and all the Greek authorities, civil and military, attended his funeral. The deceased had enjoyed the confidence of the Hellenic people, and his death was a public calamity.

If, now that the cannon's voice is silent, the statesmen had recourse to the pastoral wreath. All feelings of disappointment, however natural to the occasion, were merged in one universal sentiment of patriotic joy."

A Berlin correspondent writes:—"Humboldt, in his last letter, was surrounded by his brothers and his niece, Baroness de Bulow, and retained to the end the full use of his faculties. He asked several times when the King would return, and said that he had hoped to have seen Him again. Humboldt has bequeathed a large portion of his library and instruments to his old servant SEIF, traveling companion, for forty years, who caused him for upwards of 30 years, and who is now himself bedridden."

A reverend gentleman, Mr. Pfingsthorn, in an Indiana town, had recently brought to grief through the fashion of a pretended agency. He advertised and fifty persons claimed it, none of whom gave an accurate description of the property. As he refused to deliver it, certain parties threatened to run him out two miles in one, but the Justice dismissed the complaint, and the real owner is not yet found. Meanwhile, Mr. Pfingsthorn has the money safe.

The Rev. E. F. Berkley, of St. Louis, has published a letter descriptive of his baptism of Henry Clay. The nature of the ceremony is thus described: "Mr. Clay was baptised in his parlor, at Ashland, on the 23d of June, 1857, in my usual way, by pouring a handful of water on his head, in the name of the Holy Trinity; one of his daughters-in-law and four of his granddaughters being baptised at the same time, and in the same way."

The cruelty of the Austrian rule in Italy is very forcibly displayed in the following extract of a letter from Como, April 15: "The son of our townsman VOLTA (one of the scientific glories of Italy) is a beggar in our streets, his furniture at auction, his father's voltaic apparatus under the hammer, and the municipality reduced by war contributions to powers to avert this disgrace. The Austrian authorities know nothing and care less about electricity or genius."

Both Baron Hubner, late Austrian Envoy at Paris, and his brother, who performs the same functions at the Tuscan Court, are born Bavarians, the army and civil service of the Kaiser being filled with aborigines of the Upper Danube. The Envoy at Florence, inferior in diplomatic ability to his brother, is far more retrograde in his tendencies, to which he has converted his Scotch wife, a Glasgow Presbyterian, of the name of Farquharson.

The London Herald says of Bulwer: "As Sir Edward has been enjoined to abstain as much as possible from business, his attention is necessarily confined to the more urgent affairs of his department; but it is doubtful whether in the short time that will elapse before the meeting of Parliament, Sir Edward's health will be sufficiently restored for him then to resume the combined fatigue of Parliamentary and official life."

On Easter Monday there took place at Salisbury, England, the wedding of a cattle dealer, who had vowed that if ever he did get married he would ride to and from the church on a donkey. His friends kept him to his word, and provided fifteen donkeys, that they might bear him company en suite. This ludicrous wedding procession, headed by a fife band, went the rounds.

Mr. Wise, the aeronaut, has completed his arrangements for a balloon journey from St. Louis to the Atlantic seaboard. His balloon, the "Nineteenth Century," is 66 feet in diameter, and contains 80,000 feet of gas. Mr. Wise undertakes this journey chiefly as an experiment with which to satisfy himself of the practicability of his scheme of aeronauting across the Atlantic Ocean.

The Christian Advocate and Journal acknowledges the receipt of "a breastpin" from a devout Methodist, which piece of property is to be sold, and the proceeds appropriated to the Missions in India. The Advocate, however, requests the brethren to sell such wares in some other market than New-York, as they bring but a trifle here, and hence the proceeds are very small.

The pawning of jewels is not confined to the crown diamonds of the State, but the Princesses of the Austrian Court are stated to be in active intercourse with the Jews. Rumor also states that what used to be called a "benevolence" in the middle ages, when the clergy opened its purse-strings, is going on with the rich monasteries all over Austria.

A lady in South Boston, a night or two ago, hearing a burglar down stairs, took her station at the head of the staircase, revolver in hand, waited till the fellow appeared, and fired. The shot struck near him, whereupon he made an ignominious retreat. The papers praise the lady's pluck. She was alone in the house.

Two Roman Catholic Bishops were consecrated in St. Louis last week: Bishops O'Gorman as Vicar Apostolic of Nebraska, and Whelan as coadjutor to the Bishop of Nashville. After the ceremony the new bishops went through the church bestowing benedictions upon a kneeling crowd.

Mr. Austin Brooks, editor of the Quincy (Ill.) Herald, was assaulted in the streets in that town the other day by a German named Schermberg, who had taken offence at certain strictures of the Herald upon the disorderly condition of the Sabbath by the German population.

William Henry Adams, of Boston, Eng., the new Attorney-General for the colony of Hong Kong, has ascended the social scale to his present position thus:—Compositor, reader, reporter, sub-editor, editor and newspaper proprietor, barrister, member of Parliament, and Colonial Attorney-General.

We announced, the other day, the discovery of a new Venus at Rome. The Roman correspondent of the London Athenæum states that the sum of $10 000 has been refused for the statue by the finder. The Athenæum says: "This is no bad test of the opinions entertained of its very great beauty."

The Newark (N. J.) Mercury says, letters have been received in that city from Rev. S. L. Baldwin, who went out last October as a Missionary of the M. E. Church to Fuh Chau, China. The party reached Shanghai on the 20th of February, in 147 days from New-York—all well.

Miss Craw, a teacher in the Eaton School, in New-Haven, has been tried for cruel punishment of a boy named Samuel Smith, nine years old, but was acquitted. It appeared from the evidence that the boy was pretty soundly flogged, and that he carried the marks for some time.

There is to be a Congress of musical composers and artists in Leipsic from the 1st to the 4th of June, which will comprehend four musical performances. On the second of these, Dr. Liszt's "Gran Mass" will be produced; at the third, the Mass of Sebastian Bach.

The second Diocesan Convention of South Carolina, the Rev. William J. Boone, Missionary Bishop of China, was present. He has resided in China for twenty-two years, and augured great results from the new openings in that Empire.

A BRILLIANT NOVEL.
WE SHALL PUBLISH JUNE FIRST,
SHARPLEY,
MYSTERY OF THE VESTERVELTS.
By J. W. DeForest,
Author of "Oriental Acquaintance," "European Acquaintance," &c.
This is a story of American life, embracing some features of contrast and limits of character that are new as they are striking and natural. The personages introduced are very few in number; and the interest centres in the family upon whom the hero makes a call, in the first chapter. The plot is remarkable for its ingenious simplicity. The reader's curiosity is aroused at the outset by the mention of a mystery. Each step in the development of the story is calculated to disclose the dreadful secret; but the true solution will not be guessed, even by the most inveterate readers of fiction, until the catastrophe comes. The style of the narration is full of spirit, and the various dramatic persons are finely sketched and contrasted.
SHARPLEY will be, without question, the most fascinating novel of the season.
In one handsome volume, duodecimo, 467 pp., beautifully printed. Price $1 25.
The trade supplied on the usual terms.
Copies sent by mail, postage free, on receipt of price.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship City of Baltimore, from Queenstown, one the 11th inst., arrived here yesterday morning. A synopsis of her news had been forwarded in advance, from Cape Race, while the files and correspondence by the Vanderbilt had supplied details. We give, however, fuller and later dispatches to the hour of her departure.

The Overland California Mail, which arrived at St. Louis on Saturday night, brings intelligence that all the American residents of Hermosillo, in Sonora, had been ordered to leave the place under the penalty of death. No explanation of this sudden hostile movement is vouchsafed.

Reports of excesses committed by disappointed and starving Pike's Peak emigrants continue to reach us. A dispatch from St. Louis, founded upon a private letter from Pacific City, Iowa, gives a report that a party of them had attacked and captured an outward bound train, near O'Fallon's Bluffs, and that during the melée two persons were killed—D. C. Oakes, the conductor of the train, and Mr. Griffith, the newly-appointed postmaster at Auraria.

Our Washington telegrams state that an extraordinary session of the Cabinet was held yesterday to determine upon the character of the dispatches to be sent out by to-morrow's steamer to our Ministers in Europe, in view of the pending war. It is understood that the neutral policy of the United States is to be defined with great particularity. The dispatches, however, which are voluminous, treat generally of our commercial relations with the hostile parties.

The New-England Anniversaries commenced in Boston yesterday, and, favored by the return of pleasant weather, promise to be very fully attended. Several meetings were held yesterday, the most important of which was that of the Tract Society. Almost the first business done, was the adoption of a resolution severing all connection with the New-York Society, and declaring a reestablishment on a national basis. A resolution, subsequently introduced, expressing kindly feelings for the New-York Society, provoked a long discussion, and was finally rejected. The officers for the ensuing year were chosen.

The Board of Aldermen last evening passed an ordinance declaring the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection Acting City Inspector, when the office of City Inspector is for any cause made vacant, and adopted a resolution directing him to proceed immediately to clean the streets. The Mayor nominated Noah A. Cheire for City Inspector, and the nomination was rejected. A communication from the Mayor, in reply to the report of the Special Committee to which the nomination of Dr. Foster was referred, was read and referred to that Committee.

Mr. Charles Guiteau sent in a petition to the Board of Councilmen last evening asking that the work of removing the Rose pavement in Broadway should be advertised, that it might be done by contract. Should this course not be decided upon, he offered to do the work at a rate not to exceed $1 18 per yard. In reply to a resolution of inquiry, Mr. Busteed stated that the Manhattan Gas Company had not power to prescribe the size or quality of pipe to be used in introducing gas into houses or stores.

The Russian frigate General Admiral was yesterday thrown open to the public for inspection, free of charge, and the day being fine, a large number—some eight or ten thousand persons, paid her a visit. She lies in the Adriatic's berth, at the College Dock, foot of Canal-street, North River. Visitors will be admitted for one or two days longer.

The birthday of Queen Victoria will be appropriately celebrated by the English residents of New-York to-day. The Cunard steamer Persia has been hauled into the stream for the purpose of the latter displaying her flags and for firing the Royal salute on the occasion.

The City, yesterday, was full of drab bonnets and serious-looking men in extremely plain attire, it being the commencement of the anniversary, or yearly meeting, of that branch of Quakerdom known as the Hicksite Friends. Their yearly meeting, which is proverbial for wet weather here, this time brought with it sunshine and pleasant weather. The straight-out Quakers are gradually disappearing, but they still make a very respectable show, as far as numbers are concerned.

The earnings of the Erie Railroad for the month show a very great decrease compared with the earnings during the corresponding month last year. They were $556,120 in April, 1858, but only $380,942 last month, showing a decrease of $177,768.

Flour was in good request, yesterday, at improved prices. Some flour, represented as having been made of new wheat, at Augusta, Ga., was offered at $10 per barrel. Wheat was held above the views of buyers; hence, it was quiet. Corn was more sought after, at firmer rates. Provisions were in fair demand. Hog products were quoted dearer. Groceries were inactive. The sales of Rosin, especially Common, to arrive, were more extensive. Cotton was moderately inquired for, at unaltered figures. The movements in other branches of trade were restricted.

Mr. Burton O'Brien at Albany.—We published yesterday, Mr. O'Brien's speech at Albany. This gentleman's original purpose of abstaining from interfering with politics during his brief stay among us was wise. He has not been fortunate in swerving from that policy, even on the single point of Know-Nothingism, or in the information he displays while discussing it. It is, perhaps, not strange that politicians should be willing to avail themselves of Mr. O'Brien for party purposes, for such things are common; but that his general good sense should permit him to be thus made use of is certainly surprising. He cannot be aware of the effect which his intermeddling will produce, or that he is contributing to increase the feeling which he denounces. His case furnishes another instance of the fact that strangers never describe the interior policy of this country, or discourse upon its politics, without committing the most pitiable blunders in matters of fact.

Mr. O'Brien is to be received in this City with appropriate and well-deserved honors, be it by the municipal authorities and his own countrymen. He has made an extended tour through the United States, seen many of our public men, inspected our institutions, North and South, and will be prepared to contribute important additions to the somewhat scanty knowledge of this country enjoyed by the people of Great Britain.

English Panics and French Invasions.

If Charles Fox was right in the preference he expressed for "the old Parliamentary word 'jealousy,' over the modern word 'confidence,'" then England is certainly as safe from continental conditions as the extreme of nervous anxiety can make her. There was a time in English history when the "inviolate island" laughed all foreign threats to scorn, and met even the terrible peril of the great Armada of Spain with a feast of haughty defiance. But that time seems to have passed by. The Press and the orators of England have now no capital stock so rich in sure returns of interest and excitement, as the chronic terror of invasion which seems to have fixed itself in the British mind. On the slightest disturbance of the continental relations of the Great Powers; on the least appearance of unusual activity in the dock yards of France; on the merest rumor of a new combination between one or more states of Europe, not commonly united in their policy, England at once sets up her outcry of distress. Her leading journals thunder alarm over the land, her parliamentary candidates make the hustings ring with the "dreadful notes of war;" her captains take down the swords of Wellington, and her poets-laureate take up the lyre of Tyrtæus. If England were consciously the weakest or the wickedest of Powers, her conduct in this respect would be perfectly reasonable. If she knew herself to have fairly earned the hatred of all the world, and felt herself unequal to resist the onslaught of avenging Justice, one might attribute her propensity for panics to causes that would be rational, at least, if not respectable.

As things actually are, we are content to see in these singular performances of our trans-Atlantic kinsmen only an exaggeration of certain traits which mark our own national character. What the "British outrage" is to the public of America, that the "French invasion" is to the public of Great Britain; the expression of a sort of traditional nervousness inherent in the race, and a lively reminiscence of the history of the Past. But however these exhibitions may be accounted for, they are far from creditable to the character, and far from favorable to the influence, of the nation to which they are habitual.

Our own national "craze" is absurd enough; but it is not quite so humiliating to our self-respect, nor quite so damaging to our prestige, as the analogous lunacy of our cousins. Nor are our attacks of so frequent recurrence.

Since the peace of 1815, we have not, we believe, been "insulted" by Great Britain, nor driven to the desperate resolve of annihilating the British Empire above five or six times, and none of these crises, with the exception of the "war of 54:40," has exerted any very serious effect upon our national Constitution or our current expenses. They have all passed off in the comparatively innocuous form of abusive demonstrations against "perfidious Albion," and their worst result has been the deepening of the popular prejudice against all British institutions and all possible British Governments. We are inclined to think that nine out of every ten Americans would always enter upon the consideration of any quarrel that might arise between this country and Great Britain with a firm conviction that the word of no British Minister is ever to be trusted on a point in dispute with America. This is a state of things which we are inclined to lament, but on the British theory of international dealings it must be regarded by our kinsmen as a highly commendable state of caution and prudence. For to this complexion have the vast majority of British statesmen and British subjects too, fashioned themselves, in regard to all foreigners in general and to the French in particular. Whatever Prince, Potentate or people happens to differ with England on a question of policy, is thereby convicted at once before the tribunal of British opinion of the blackest villainy. When an American President resisted, in 1812, the British claim to board American men-of-war in search of British seamen, it was clear that the astute and unprincipled Yankee was merely availing himself of a pretext for profiting by England's embarrassment in a general war. When a French King objected, in 1840, to the insolent exclusion of France from a treaty for the settlement of the East, it was clear that he was merely seeking to build up a power in Egypt which might enable him to cut off England's communication with India. When the Czar Nicholas, in 1853, attempted to complete the arrangements on which a succession of English Ministers had complaisantly smiled ever since 1829, and to enforce claims which Tory Lord Aberdeen and Whig Lord John Russell had united in countenancing, it was clear that he was a monster of deceitful ambition, a common burglar, and a dishonorable perjurer. When the King of Prussia, in 1854, preferred the peace and progress of his own realm to the policy of the Western Allies, it was clear that he was a base and vulgar palterer, who deserved to be taught his duty as an independent Prince, and to be forced to do it.

But of all offenders against the unsuspicious honesty of Great Britain, no one is so pertinacious or so profligate as France. In the midst of the profoundest harmony; in the most unreserved moments of international confidence and affection; when Lord Mayors and Prefects are exchanging civic embraces, and Queens and Emperors are saluting each other with the kiss of peace, this unregenerate and diabolical nation is always plotting the obliteration of England and the misery of the Isle of Man. Between the accession of Louis Philippe in 1830, and his abdication in 1848, England had an attack of "French invasion," no less than five times, although during the whole period of the reign of the "Napoleon of Peace," France never possessed a navy of one-half the strength of the English fleets. The Republic of 1848 had hardly been acknowledged by the Court, before it received the compliment of a panic from the people of England. The coup d'état of 1851 was of course immediately welcomed on the Northern side of the channel with a spasm of unprecedented violence. The coronation of the Prince-President as Emperor gave birth to still another panic, in the course of which Sir James Graham and Lord John Russell took occasion mildly to allude to the new sovereign as a "pirate and a traitor." The pirate and traitor, however, instead of placing himself against England, joined that Power cordially in repelling the pretensions of the Czar, and though there were flying rumors about the time of the battle of Inkerman, that France would assuredly take advantage of England's distresses in the war to break the alliance and invade her sacred shores, no such calamity really came to pass, and for nearly a year England contented herself in so incredibly credulous an to believe that a Napoleon might be almost as honest as a Guelph. The completion of Cherbourg, however, and the splendid revelation then made of the naval progress of France, restored things to their normal condition. The national skepticism had its full and fearful course, and glorified itself exceedingly. The people who had been ready to make war with France in January, because certain French colonels talked of chasing the would-be assassins of their Emperor into that "vile den" of London, in July thought it quite proper and natural to speak of the French as a nation of slaves, and of the Emperor Napoleon III. as a "liar," a "traitor," a "crowned assassin," an "unscrupulous conspirator." Nevertheless England was not invaded.

A year has passed on, and brought in due course its own new alarm. This time there can be no mistake. Two villains instead of one are at work now. Two Imperial repositories, whose united naval force far outnumbers that of England, and whose military strength is more than a match for all Europe beside, are banded now to "destroy the only refuge of liberty in Europe." There is no time to be lost. All England must take to its ships or its rifles. By land and sea the sons of Albion must gather, to ward off the blows of "a conspiracy threatening her with the greatest danger through which she has ever passed!"

If the Press of the United States had uttered against England and her Government, one-half of the inanest charges leveled by the Press of England, during the last six weeks, at the rulers of Russia and of France, our amiable cousins, rich as is their vocabulary of vituperation, would have been at a loss for words to describe the devilish license of Democratic writers. If the people of the United States had exhibited, on the news of a general European coalition, one-half the perturbation excited in England by the mere rumor of a treaty which nobody professes to have seen between two States profoundly at peace with England, for the purpose of securing objects which England herself can find no rational ground for denouncing, the world would have been justified in demanding an inventory of our dominions, in administering upon us as a defunct State. In all the earth, England, we are sure, has no such enemy as herself. If the leaders of her public would but prevail upon themselves to believe that other Powers may really have objects of their own which do not involve the destruction of Great Britain; if they would but abdicate that sublimity of cant and self-conceit in which they sit aloft surveying mankind, and see in every movement of every nation about them only an open or a secret demonstration against the honor, the dignity, and the spotless, unselfish virtue of England, it is just possible that they might make the influence of their country respected and useful abroad, without weakening her strength at home, and escape the ridicule now provoked by her domestic panics, without increasing in the least her exposure to the very improbable perils of foreign invasion.

A Very Pretty Quarrel.

We have often referred to the brilliant promises with which Mr. Buchanan opened his reign, and particularly to the expectations he held out to every body of a great military triumph in Utah. He attacked the Saints on two sides at once—assailed them both with weapons of war and moral suasion. A peace commission and an expeditionary army marched on them in parallel columns. Whether they fought or argued, the triumph of the Administration was certain. Brigham Young, with all his tact and cunning, could devise no way of saving himself from a forced contribution to its glory. Whether General Johnston pounded him into submission, or Colonel Kane talked him into it, made no difference. He had in any case to march in chains behind the Consul's chariot.

As we all know, there was no fighting. The Peace Commission did the business. The error of his way was made plain to the high-priest—and the whole Mormon nation accepted the American yoke with due humility. The Guerillas laid down their arms; the passes were opened; the army marched on to the capital; Governor Cumming was duly installed; the United States Judges reassumed and proceeded to purify their sullied ermine; and Mr. Buchanan appeared before the world as the solver of the toughest problem which the nation has had submitted for its consideration since the foundation of the Government. Any little mistakes that were made about that Lecompton affair were at least amply atoned for in Utah.

However, we had hardly reassumed our legitimate sway over this stiffnecked people, when it became apparent that, in spite of their dutiful demeanor towards Mr. Buchanan, and their wholesome dread of his vigor, there were really amongst the members of their Church, in good and regular standing, a large number of as thorough-paced cut-throats and brigands as ever graced any community with their presence. It appeared that, during the short interval of Mormon rule, overt acts of resistance to the authority of the United States were not the only sins of which the Saints had been guilty. A large number of murders, robberies, and outrages of every degree, had been committed on the persons and property of people within the peace of the United States, and entitled to its protection. To have included offences of this sort in the general amnesty, would have been a stretch of ridiculous clemency of which even the great heart of James Buchanan was not capable. The ability of the Government to deal out punishment on the offenders, many of whom were known to be flourishing in unabashed publicity in the Salt Lake City, in no way ashamed of their performances, was a capital test of the reality of the Mormon submission.

This test has been applied, and the result has been very curious. The very first infusion of the common-law doctrines on the subject of murder and pillage into Mormon ethics, bids fair to produce civil war and anarchy. In other words, when our venerable President began to pluck the fruit of his great victory, he found it all a Dead Sea fruit—rosy as New-Jersey apples on the outside, and all ashes under the skin. The minute the Courts were opened, and the Mormons were summoned on the Grand and Petty Juries, they refused either to present or convict anybody, no matter of what offence he had been guilty, and threatened violence to all Gentiles and traitorous Mormons in attendance on the Courts. The United States Judge found himself under a spells. The criminals were there, and the juries were there, and the corpora delicticum were there, and the law was there, and the executioner—in short, all the appurtenances and paraphernalia of pure justice. But the juries, and the judge, and the criminals, and the offences, and the executioner and jailor were found to have nothing whatever to do with each other, and the only result of "holding Court," which, at one time, seemed as all probable to his Honor the Judge, was that his Honor himself would receive "a licking," at the hands of the "jurors aforesaid." In this extremity he called in the aid of a military force, to protect him, and General Johnston declared his intention to stand by the Courts and enforce the law. At this juncture Mr. Buchanan's skill and tact both in taking his measures and choosing his men made themselves fully apparent. Under an ordinary, commonplace, incompetent President, the Courts, the Executive and the army would have worked together in stupid, humdrum harmony, and done something towards restoring to the Territory the reign of a monotonous tranquillity. Our present Administration does not do things, however, in this milk-sop way. It makes confusion worse confounded, we presume, in order to show the world from what absurd embarrassments the American nation can, when the pinch comes, extricate itself unaided. The Mormon difficulty, when Mr. Buchanan entered the White House, consisted simply of the rebellion of a parcel of lecherous lunatics against a powerful Government, an affair to be crushed by three or four battalions and a couple of batteries; but, under his skillful manipulation, it has now resolved itself into a civil war between the Federal General in command of the regular troops, aided and abetted by the Judge of the Federal Court on the one side, and the United States Governor and the Mormon militia on the other. This grave fact was announced with proper solemnity in Mr. Buchanan's organ in this City yesterday morning. "It would appear," says the Herald, "that the differences so long existing between the Executive and the Judiciary are about to result in a collision between the United States troops under General Johnston, and the Mormon militia under General Wells, five thousand of the latter having been called out by Governor Cumming," &c., &c.

We defy Miramon and Juarez themselves to produce a prettier piece of anarchy in the time than this is, and we congratulate the country on the ingenuity of our venerable Chief Magistrate.

Corrections of the Constitution.

Mr. Buchanan's new organ, the Constitution, employs itself chiefly in correcting misstatements respecting the Administration. The Republican journals furnish it a great deal of work, and those of its own political household about as much. Between the two it is kept uncomfortably busy. For several days past, as we are informed in its issue of Saturday, the organ has been disquieted by "dark hints in various papers" that

"through the interference of third parties, a meeting had been arranged, and had actually taken place, between the President and Senator Douglas, at which their political differences were satisfactorily adjusted."

"So long as these assertions were confined to the mere conjectures of newspaper correspondents," the Constitution, as became the dignity of its position, paid little attention to them. But at length it sees the reconciliation "positively affirmed in the Charleston Mercury," by a Washington Correspondent, who is indorsed by the Mercury as reliable, and the organ hastens "to give the fullest and most unequivocal denial" to the statement.

"No such interview has taken place, nor the anything been said or done by the President which could give the slightest foundation for the report."

That, we suppose, settles the question. Buchanan and Douglas are still at war, and likely so to remain. The President is manifestly anxious not to be misapprehended on this point, especially at Charleston.

When the Mercury published the letter in question from its "reliable" correspondent, it indulged in some significant editorial comments, the burden of which was that the Southern Democracy would not think of supporting a man for the Presidency who held such opinions in respect to slave property as have been avowed by Douglas, and that any candidate who looked for Southern support, must maintain the duty of Congress to protect such property in the territories. This seems to be settled upon as a sine qua non, and we, therefore, witness Mr. Buchanan's prompt disclaimer of all sympathy with Douglas.

Whether the South will adhere to the dogma in question in the Charleston Convention, may, perhaps, be regarded as uncertain; for, when delegates meet from all sections of the Union, anxious for victory, and intent upon the means to secure it, concessions are apt to be made which, under other circumstances, would be scouted. We have seen such things, and shall see them again. But, if the Democratic platform of 1860 is to embrace the plank referred to, the Charleston Mercury and its friends may as well understand first as last that their candidate, be he who he may, cannot carry a single Free State. He will have difficulty enough to do so under the most favorable circumstances, and without such a millstone tied to his neck. But, let it once be understood that he is pledged to give special protection to slave property, and his votes north of Mason and Dixon's Line will not be worth counting.

The Wealth of the West.

During all the months of the late Winter the public mind of the Western States was agitated by visions of wealth believed to be within easy grasp of an adventurous population. The treasures thus coveted lay not in their exuberant soil. Three successive seasons of failure had saddened the hearts of Western husbandmen, and almost shaken confidence in their fertile lands. Late Springs, followed by rainy Summers, proved disastrous to the productions of the earth, and to the hopes of those who tilled it.

Their gloom at length caught a ray from the newly discovered gold fields, and they were in a frame of mind to receive eagerly and credit with slight scrutiny the tales of treasure to be found at Pike's Peak.

Accordingly with the opening Spring the great Valley poured forth its thousands to dig for gold. They left behind those prairies whose almost fabulous fertility had, in former years, drawn them from Eastern homes, and rushed headlong across the plains, where the shining ore was expected to reward all their labors and privations. Next Fall they trusted to return enriched and content.

That dream is over. Before the Summer has begun they are hastening back, hungry, naked, and desperate. The gold was a delusion; they rush from its reputed locality as from the embrace of death. Not a few indeed have perished in their mad endeavor to become suddenly rich, while those who survive are but too happy to return to the homes they so lately abandoned.

While they have been absent Nature has not been idle. Her beneficent hand has clothed the earth with richest verdure. The fields of the Mississippi Valley are covered with grain. Everywhere the promise of unwasted plenty greets the eye. The crops, now whitening for the harvest in Illinois, Iowa and Indiana, surpass in value all that the most sanguine expected from Pike's Peak. It is at home that the deluded miners should have delved for treasure. The earth may seem a capricious, but never is an unkind, mother. She rewards, always, the labors of the husbandman.

At the present time we have, from every quarter of the country, but more especially from the Western States, intelligence of crops abundant almost without parallel. Should no untoward change take place, the products of the West will constitute a fund of wealth better, far better, than the utmost anticipations ventured to claim from the diggings at Pike's Peak.

The City Inspectorship.

The streets sink deeper and deeper under the mud, while the Mayor and Aldermen get further every week from the settlement of the question who shall clean them, and once more let down the light of the blessed sun upon the outside stones. Last evening the Aldermen so amended an existing ordinance as to authorize, in case of a vacancy in the office of City Inspector, the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection to do the traditionary duties of that officer, which being translated, means that Richard C. Dowling, on a salary of $2,500, should continue the dirty policy of his late distinguished chief—and probably his long training fits him better than any other man, in the Aldermanic estimation, to do nothing, and preserve for the City its sour, unwholesome odor until Summer sets in. This indirect nomination was eminently fit to be made, by the men that made it—certainly in no other sense. It is possible, that according to the Mayor's suggestion to the Board of Health yesterday, Mr. Dowling might very well manage the removal of night-soil, and street-cleaning, under the direction of the Mayor; but to make him City Inspector, would be simply to sound the trumpet for Morton's resurrection, before the first flush of joy at that defunct officer's removal were fairly over.

Meanwhile, Mayor Tieman shook again the confidence of sanitary reformers in him, by sending in the name of Noah A. Cheire for City Inspector. Mr. Cheire is a very worthy citizen and a consistent Democrat. He served the Eleventh Assembly District in the Legislature of 1858 and 1859 honestly and creditably. But there was force in Alderman Spence's objection to him—that he kept his swill-milk stables in a very filthy condition; and no man who keeps a stump-tail milk establishment in such a filthy state as to disgust swill-milk men, is fit to be Inspector of nuisances, and head of the Health Department of such a City as New-York. Mayor Tieman has been unfortunate in his later nominations. The faith that he formerly professed as to the qualifications of a City Inspector he seems to have forsaken. His new nominee was promptly rejected of course,—the factious policy of the Aldermen leading them at last, by a blunder, to do a very good thing.

But in reply to the report of the Select Committee on the nomination of Dr. Foster, the Mayor sent in a message last evening that did him credit. With a protest against the doctrine of the report, he reads them a wholesome lesson on Democratic usages, argues well the question of aldermanic right to "advise" as well as "consent to" a nomination, quotes Kent and Story, and Madison and Andrew Jackson, and again protests, and puts his protest on file, against their riotous usurpation of power. All this while the streets fester with filth, and Summer, with its heavy pack of pestilence, heaves in sight.

Simply Sam Slick.—It appears, after all, that Sam Slick has not been Knighted, and he is only Mr. Samuel Slick, though having been elected a member of Parliament at the last election, he can add an M. P. to his name. The Judge Haliburton who has had knightly honors bestowed upon him, is the Chief Justice of Nova-Scotia, and a much older man than "the old Judge," who brought himself into notice, not by his judicial career, but by caricaturing the Yankees.

Genuine Notes with Forged Signatures.

New-York, Monday, May 23, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The amount of genuine notes with forged signatures of the Brighton Market Bank already returned in Wall-street is several thousand.

This morning we received a dispatch from Nashville, announcing that packages of notes of the Bank of Chattanooga have been received there with forged signatures, and almost simultaneously the express brings large amounts of these in the street. This is the fourth like fraud within a fortnight.

Yours, respectfully, THOMPSON BROS.

Timely Accession to our Naval Force.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

At this time, when hostilities have actually commenced which may end in the utter subversion of the existing relations of European nations, and may involve us as well; when we have so much at stake, so many interests to defend, neutrality to enforce, commerce to protect, the inviolability of our flag to assert, it is most gratifying to know, that the redoubtable "coal-barge and canal-boat" which has returned in triumph to our shores, after spreading consternation through Paraguay, will actually become the property of our Government! It is even so. These formidable vessels of the Cromwell Line, it is to be hoped, will soon display their smoke-stacks in the Mediterranean, and make our maritime power justly appreciated. How eagerly will our friendship be courted when these novel infernal machines make their appearance among the belligerents! How jealously and suspiciously will they be watched!

These thoughts were suggested, and my bosom caused to swell with patriotic emotion by the sight of the two noble war-steamers which had just anchored off the Navy-yard, as I crossed the Peck-slip Ferry last evening. The investment of a penny will enable all who are disposed to, enjoy the sight; it is well worth the money!

Provision for Retired Army Officers.

The following petition is in circulation for signatures among the officers of the Army:

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The undersigned officers of the United States Army, believing that a law making just and honorable provisions for the retirement from active service of such officers of the Army as have become, from any cause not dishonorable in itself, unable to meet all the requisitions of such service, would be highly conducive to the efficiency of the Army, and just to those who still have to perform that service, respectfully beg leave, through this their humble petition, earnestly to commend the subject to the favorable consideration of your honorable bodies, and to pray that you will be pleased to make such enactments on the subject as are required by the interests of this branch of the public service.

Another Presidential Candidate.—The Chester (Pa.) Republican strongly recommends the Hon. Jeremiah S. Black, one of the Supreme Court Judges of Pennsylvania, as a proper man to be nominated for President by the Republicans, and claims that Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, named him in a speech in the Senate last Winter, as likely to be one of those from among whom the nominee of that Party would be taken. The Republican claims for Mr. Black all desirable qualifications, moral and intellectual, as well positive as negative. It especially insists that he has a clean record, and is, therefore, unassailable.

Advertising Agency.—As the benefits of advertising become more generally understood, a class of agents naturally grows up through whom advertising in any or all the journals of the country may be easily and safely effected. John Hogan & Co. have recently opened an office of this sort in the Times Building, and their announcement will be found in another column. From long business experience with them we know them to be enterprising, accurate and perfectly reliable, and that any business intrusted to their hands will be carefully and properly done.

Sir Francis Sykes and his brother, Capt. Sykes, of H. B. M. 11th Hussars, are in town, having just returned from their late hunting tour in Florida. They bring with them many trophies of the chase. We understand they intend tasting the wild sports of the West ere long. They are stopping at the Stevens House. We also notice the name of Lord Francis Conyngham (son of the Marquis of that name) at the same hotel.

Anniversary Week in Boston.

THE PEACE SOCIETY.

Boston, Monday, May 23.

After a long rain, the weather has cleared up genially, and the indications are favorable to an unusually large attendance at the anniversary meetings this week.

At the business meeting of the Peace Society this afternoon, the Rev. Francis Wayland, D. D., LL. D., was elected President in place of the Hon. Mr. Jay, deceased, and the other old officers were generally chosen.

The Treasurer's report shows the receipts of the past year to have been $4,789 19, and the expenditures $4,819 42, leaving a balance in the Treasurer's hands of only $162 38. The Society has issued during the year about twelve millions of tract pages.

This evening a public meeting was held at Park-street Church, when the Rev. Geo. B. Cheever pronounced an eloquent eulogy on the late President.

THE AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.

The American Educational Society held their annual meeting, to-day, and elected most of their old Board of officers. The Treasurer's report showed the receipts of the year, $23,166 50; the expenditures, $19,528 94; the permanent fund is $79,944. Four young men and twenty-seven institutions have been aided during the year.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Vice-President—The Rev. N. L. Frothingham.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

A resolution to retire from connection with the New-York Society was taken up.

Mr. Rand moved the adoption of the resolution, as follows:

Whereas, The American Tract Society in Boston was originally incorporated as a national society, and afterward, by its own vote, became a branch of the American Tract Society in New-York; and

Whereas, This Society, at its last annual meeting, voted that greater energy and efficiency would be imparted to the tract system by a return to its original status; and

Whereas, The experience of the year now closing has only served to confirm the propriety of this decision; therefore,

Resolved, That the vote of this Society in 1855, that it become a branch of the New-York Society be and the same is hereby rescinded, and that this Society resume its original position as an independent national institution. It is to be hoped, that should the relation, which has existed for so long a time and from which in past years so great an amount of good has resulted to both societies, be thus dissolved, they may henceforth operate in their different spheres with harmony and greatly increased usefulness in promoting the glory of our common Lord and the salvation of souls.

Without discussion, it was almost unanimously adopted, there being but three or four nays out of about two hundred gentlemen present.

Another resolution was offered, by the Rev. Mr. Cort, expressing kindly feelings and sentiments toward the New-York Society, which occasioned considerable debate, and was indefinitely postponed by a nearly unanimous vote.

Several amendments to the Constitution were adopted, this being rendered necessary by the separation from the New-York Society.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the publication during the present year of any well written tract or tracts, which may be offered to the Publishing Committee, calculated to arouse and concentrate the religious sentiments of all Christian men against the Slave trade, and to set forth its great wickedness against the national will, meet with the warm approbation of the Society.

The following officers were then elected:

Vice-Presidents—Wm. Rogers, Esq., the Hon. Saml. Williams, the Hon. Jacob Sleeper and the Hon. Francis O. Watts, of Massachusetts; the Rev. Francis D. Wayland, D. D., of Rhode Island; the Rev. Joel Hawes, D. D., of Connecticut; the Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, D. D., of New-York.

ECCLESIASTICAL MOVEMENTS.

Meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly—Opening Proceedings.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Friday, May 20, 1859.

The General Assembly of the O. S. Presbyterian Church commenced its Seventy-first Session yesterday, at 11 o'clock. Considering the immense proportions of the Church, it could hardly be expected that a city which was only laid out in 1821 could provide accommodations for its Supreme Court. There is little to be complained of on that score. On the contrary, hospitality has been driven to the utmost stretch, and all Commissioners and attaches of the Assembly are comfortably housed. The first thing attended to, on such occasions, is the preaching of the opening sermon by the Moderator, Dr. SCOTT, of San Francisco, being the Moderator of the expiring ecclesiastical year, was eagerly looked for, but up till other expected hour he was not heard of. In such an emergency, the Church has a law to the effect that, in case of the absence of the Moderator, the Commissioners present choose their preacher. After Dr. RANKIN, the Stated Clerk, had read the decree on the subject, the Rev. Dr. MCGILL, Permanent Clerk of the Assembly, nominated the Rev. Dr. RUSS, of Chicago, to preach the opening sermon. The Assembly unanimously elected the nominee, and accordingly Dr. RUSS proceeded. It is well that some of the clergy are always prepared. Dr. RUSS is unquestionably one of these, as his sermon abundantly testified. He preached from the text: "We walk by faith, and not by sight." We cannot resist to bear testimony to great excellence when it crosses our path, and in this instance we accord it to the eminent minister of Chicago. The appearance of a man is a good first intuitive of his character. Dr. RUSS is a man of small stature, but he has a head on him with a boldness of feature and a brilliancy of eye that would not be out of place on the shoulders of a young Hercules.

After sermon, the first business in regular order is the appointment of Moderator for the existing ecclesiastical year. The Rev. WM. L. BREKENRIDGE was elected by unanimous acclamation. This is not the distinguished theologian and controversialist of the same name. He is his brother. He is a mild, retiring gentleman, who has, by attending to the peaceful pursuits of pastoral life, gained the respect of all his friends, and the chief honor of the Church which he has served so well and so long. The Rev. ROBERT J. BRECKENRIDGE, though elected a Commissioner, will not be present at the present Assembly, owing to the sudden and sad death of his wife. His absence is much regretted, as, in discussing the great questions that come before them, the various Assemblies have become so accustomed to his voice that his absence on any occasion seems an unlooked-for calamity.

After various details of a routine nature, the Assembly proceeded to determine upon its next place of meeting. The places nominated were Rochester, Philadelphia and Memphis. The roll was called, and by a large majority Rochester was declared the place of meeting for 1860.

The Stated Clerk announced that nine new Presbyteries had been added to the Assembly during the past year, the largest addition known in the history of the Church. The present Assembly is the largest that has ever been recorded. There are now, on the roll this morning, 320 Commissioners present, and it is expected that more will yet be added. There are 130 Presbyteries in the Assembly, each one of which has the right, according to its numbers, to send a Commissioner or Commissioners to the Supreme Court. It will be seen by the annual return that the representation is full. Business is hardly commenced yet, but it is expected that this Assembly will be among the most protracted and stirring of late days. Questions in regard to some of the Boards of the Church will be discussed, which are likely to range the debaters of the Court in hot controversy on opposing sides. It is also expected that matters affecting the dismission of the ministerial office, and the legitimacy of marriage with a deceased wife's sister will be discussed.

There are present of the distinguished lights of the Church present on this occasion: Thornwell, of South Carolina; Rice, of Chicago; MacMaster, of Indiana; McGill, of Princeton Seminary; Humphrey, of Danville; Palmer, of New-Orleans; Smith, of Union Seminary, Virginia; Anderson, of St. Louis, &c. Among the laymen present are Simpson, Chief Justice of the State of Kentucky, Judge Giles, of Maryland, &c. The Assembly is now adjourned till 9 A. M. to-morrow.

Let me say a word or two about this place. In the meantime the city is like a little lodge in a wilderness. You are passing through what would seem an unbroken forest, a spire or chimney here and there pointing upward. You enter the city and it bears all the marks and tokens of youth and enterprise. Immense grounds are laid out for future occupancy, and the squares and streets already built are of noble dimensions. It is striking with dust and heat just now, but we have the advantage of any breeze that blows, which, where the streets are wide, would be very agreeable and refreshing. The population will soon reach 20,000, but this will be considered large when we think of the age of the city, little more than thirty years old, and all. When we remember that, unlike Chicago and Cincinnati, it is deprived of the advantages of either river or lake. The public buildings are rather behind the age. By the way, the chamber in which the Assembly meets is a poor Norman building, and will add much to the assumed beauty of the architecture of the city. The hotels, too, are good. I can speak for the Palmer House. It has 300 rooms, and is a gentlemanly proprietor. The State House was great on fastening building, but it appears to be really out of whose hands they looked, but only shame. They seem to be repenting of their past impositions, and they are tearing from them their cloak of hypocrisy, as it letting the cheese of their subsidiest appear. I understand that the capital trade of the city is such as might be expected from its situation in the centre of streets and farms produce. It is worthy of recording, that by virtue of the new Constitution of the State of Indiana, now in force about a year, no negro is permitted to settle within the boundaries thereof. It is to also in Wisconsin. Now Abolitionists and Conservatives respectively view this policy, I leave for your readers to divine.

[IN THE MEANTIME.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Ia., Monday, May 23.

The report of the Board of Foreign Missions was read.

The Rev. Mr. GRANT, of Wisconsin, a returned Missionary from China, spoke of the civilization of the Chinese, their attainments in science and progress in agriculture. The remainder of the day was spent in discussing the report of the Committee in regard to the transfer of the Western Theological Seminary. A resolution was adopted to receive the Seminary under the especial patronage of the General Assembly; the point of location was then discussed, and without concluding on it, the Assembly adjourned.

CITY INTELLIGENCE

THE RUSSIAN FRIGATE GENERAL ADMIRAL.—Yesterday being the first day which the people of New-York have enjoyed for visiting this fine frigate, and the day being the pleasantest for two weeks, there was a very large number who availed themselves of the invitation offered by Mr. WEAD, and the Russian officers, to pay her a visit. The first intention, to charge a small fee to each person for admission, for the benefit of an excellent charity, was changed by request of Captain SOMMERACKER, who did not relish the idea of making a show of the General Admiral at a dime a head. The gates were opened at 8 o'clock, at which time a large number had already gathered, for admission. For the first three or four hours the gate-keepers counted some eight hundred persons hourly who passed on board. The numbers continued to increase, and from 1 to half-past 3 o'clock P. M., nearly three thousand persons were admitted, so that it was estimated that nearly eight thousand persons, male and female, visited the ship during the day. The ship lies in the Artistic's berth, on the south side of the pier. Two gangways were rigged, one for entering and another for leaving the ship, and the stream of comers and goers was continual throughout the day. The visitors were, of course, allowed full range in every part, and, as far as possible, every attention was shown them by the officers. Much admiration was expressed at the grand proportions of the ship, and the ladies were particularly pleased with the elegant finish of the cabins, the furniture, the splendid silver ware, and other objects of attraction. She will continue open for one or two days longer.

COMMISSIONERS OF HEALTH.—The Health Commissioners met at the Mayor's Office, at noon yesterday. It was directed that the bark Amelie, from Rio de Janeiro, arrived at this port, be permitted to come up to the City to-day. Doctor ROCKWELL and MILLER, to whom the slaughter-house nuisance in Mott-street was referred, reported that they had inspected the slaughter-house, and found that the complaint against it was a just one. The subject was referred to Dr. ROCKWELL and Commissioner CORNELL, with power to abate the nuisance. A petition, setting forth that the slaughter-house, No. 174 East Twenty-eighth-street, was a nuisance, and asking that it be abated, was referred to the same Commissioners, with power. A proposition from one Mr. GARRY, to remove the night soil, from the present time till Jan. 1 next, for a compensation at the rate of $30,000 per annum, was referred to the Mayor, with directions to report at the next meeting. The Mayor made a verbal report with regard to the subject of removing night soil and cleaning streets, previously referred to him and the Comptroller. He said he deemed that, as the Chief Magistrate of the City, he could, under the charter, assume the entire supervision of the work under existing circumstances; the Executive Officer of the City had control over the subordinates of all the Departments of the City Government, in the absence of the heads thereof. The work could go on as before, under the superintendent of Sanitary Inspection, the latter to be under the direction of the Mayor. The subject was laid over till Wednesday, to which day the Board adjourned.

THE COLUMBIA-STREET MYSTERY.—The body of a prematurely born infant was found, yesterday, in the vault in the rear of the tenement house, No. 125 Columbia-street, where portions of the mutilated remains of a woman were discovered on Sunday. This additional discovery strengthens the suspicion that the deceased woman died from the effects of an attempted abortion, and that the abortionist cut up the body to conceal her death. As yet no further clue has been obtained tending to the identification of the deceased. The Coroner's deputies and the Police are still endeavoring to unravel the mystery. An inquest was held on the body of the infant, and a verdict rendered that it came to its death from some cause unknown to the jury. Yesterday morning a man, who said he had recently returned from California, called at the Eleventh Precinct Station-house, and stated that his wife, who was about nineteen years of age, left Philadelphia some time ago, in company of a Polander, and that they lodged in Cherry-street. They had since disappeared, and it was his opinion that she had been murdered by her paramour, and that the remains were here. He left with Captain SQUIRE a full description of his wife and the Polander. The Police ascertained, yesterday, that one morning last week, a girl of fourteen, residing in Mott-street, attended a little girl to school, and that she had not been heard from since. The missing girl was very large of her age.

WIDENING NASSAU-STREET.—The Committee on Streets of the Board of Aldermen, to which was referred a petition asking that Nassau-street be widened from Pine to Beekman streets, met at 1 P. M. yesterday. Alderman BOGLE stated the object of the meeting, and said that the Committee was in favor of widening the street, but was doubtful on which side it should be widened. Mr. B. M. WHITLOCK argued that Nassau-street was a narrow street, connecting important portions of the City; its opening would relieve Broadway; and he was for widening it on the west side. Mr. D. FANNIAN opposed the widening, and endeavored to show that Mr. WHITLOCK was influenced by interested considerations in this matter. Mr. WHITLOCK repelled the insinuation. Mr. H. N. VAIL, counsel for several property owners, opposed the widening; it would cost more than it would come to, and was not called for by the public interests. A lengthy conversation with regard to the propriety of the proposed improvement followed between the members of the Committee and those who asked for and those who opposed the widening. Alderman LYONS and OWENS said the Committee was not in favor of or opposed to it; Alderman BOGLE had spoken for himself. It was finally agreed that the Committee should not report for ten days, during which time the Committee would, perhaps, get up a new map of the street, and all who were interested might present their views in writing.

LARGE ARRIVALS AT THIS PORT.—The long prevalence of easterly winds has prevented the sailing of large numbers of vessels, until yesterday, when the change of wind, and the return of fine weather, gave them a chance to go to sea, and there was a large fleet of foreign, as well as coastwise vessels which cleared the port. The large number of arrivals during the week past will give some idea of the extent of the commerce of this port, during what is termed a very dull season for freights and shipping. There arrived at this port from the 15th to the 23d instant: 34 steamships, 20 ships, 4 United States naval vessels, 45 barks, 57 brigs, and 187 schooners; total 348 vessels, not including river craft. Seventeen hundred passengers arrived in steamers and sailing ships, whose names were published exclusive of immigrants, and 1,750 passengers sailed in steamers and other vessels, including about 500 to California.

FUNERAL OF CAPTAIN BURNING.—The funeral of Captain R. L. BURNING took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of Mr. FIRMONE, in Lexington-avenue, near Thirty-sixth-street, and was largely attended by the friends of the family, sea captains, merchants and others. Captain BURNING was forty-four years of age, and has been for about twenty-five years a sea captain, and for the great part of this time in command of the ships of GRINNELL, MINTURN & Co., in their Liverpool line. He commanded the Constitution, Gladiator, Aurora, and other vessels, and left the last-named vessel when his disease—that of the heart—compelled him to give up duty. He leaves a wife and family.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—To-day being the fortieth anniversary of the birth of Queen VICTORIA, the event will be duly honored by all loyal Englishmen in this City as well as by others who cherish the name and virtues of the British Queen. The English shipping in the harbor will be dressed in holiday attire, the office of the British Consul will be decorated, as usual, with the cross of St. George, blending with the stars and stripes, while the Royal Mail steamer Persia, which is already anchored in the North River, preparatory to her departure on Wednesday, will be in the better position to display her bunting, and to fire the Royal salute. In the absence of any English vessel-of-war in this port, the Persia will make the necessary demonstrations in honor of the Queen.

ESCAPED FEMALE CONVICT ARRESTED.—About a week ago, two female convicts escaped from the Massachusetts State Prison at Springfield, having surreptitiously retained possession of the school-boys, and let themselves out. It was ascertained that one of the women had sent a package to this City, through Adams' Express Company, and a telegram was sent to the Police Head-quarters, giving a description of the woman, and asking her arrest, should she call for the package. Sure enough, the woman made her appearance at the office yesterday, and was at once arrested and sent by an afternoon train to Springfield. The name of the woman is FANNY C. GRANT. She had served eleven months in prison. Her offence was grand larceny, and her sentence was for three years.

NEW STEAMBOAT.—The new Bridgeport steamer John Brooks has been placed on the the Balance Dock to be repaired, and will commence her regular trips in a few days. Her model is one of the finest, her hull is built in the strongest manner, and she is finished in the neatest style of our river and Sound boats. She is 250 feet long, 11 feet deep, and 34 feet breadth of beam. The engine was built at the Allaire Works, and is of 60 inches diameter of cylinder, with 12 feet stroke of piston, with all the modern improvements. She is built for the Naugatuck Transportation Company, and will be commanded by Capt. JOHN BREWER.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The first regular monthly meeting of this Association was held last evening for the first time, in their new rooms, No. 617 Broadway. Mr. MASSENA presided. There was a large attendance, and after the usual routine business, a number of new members were admitted. Mr. N. A. CALKINS read an essay upon the subject of "Man's Rulers," characterizing them as personal gratification, love of applause, fashion, regard for public opinion, desire of esteem, and love of wealth. The love of Right, and the desire to please God were, as against all these motives the true object of the young Christian's aim.

ALLEGED INCENDIARISM.—At 2 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the stable of R. N. CRANDER, corner of Tenth-avenue and Sixty-eighth-street. The stable and contents were consumed, the loss being $300, which is covered by insurance in the Greenwich Insurance Company. BENJAMIN WARNER, a young man who was recently in the employ of Mr. CRANDER, was arrested on a suspicion of having fired the place. He is alleged to have been seen near to enter the stable. Justice KELLY committed him to await examination.

The weekly meeting of the Farmers' Club was held in the Cooper Institute at noon yesterday. Mr. PELL read a valuable paper on Manures, Mr. FULLER exhibited some noble specimens of the weeds that torment the tillers of the soil, and there was, beside, an instructive debate on the way to renovate old orchards, and fetch fruit trees to their fruitage. The attendance was large, among whom were several ladies and their farming husbands, who happened to be in the City. The American Institute has opened its commodious rooms in the Cooper Building, and its library and reading-room are now ready for use.

OFF THE TRACK.—The cars of the Flushing Railroad, after leading the down passengers by the 8¾ A. M. train, yesterday, ran off the track near the switch at Hunter's Point. No one was injured. The accident, however, detained the second (7:30) train so long that the passengers not reaching Hunter's Point in time to meet the steamer Mattano, which calls for them on her way down from Astoria, were compelled to cross the Thirty-fourth-street ferry, and take the Second and Third avenue cars.

ANOTHER FATAL FALL FROM A WINDOW.—JACOB WEMMES, a little boy two years old, yesterday, accidentally fell from a second-story window of his parents' residence, No. 202 Fifth-street, struck the pavement, and was instantly killed. An inquest was held on the body, and a verdict rendered accordingly.

DEATH FROM A CAMPHENE LAMP EXPLOSION.—MARGRETA J. WEIDEMANN, a married German woman, about 20 years old, died, yesterday, from the effects of burns received the evening previous by the explosion of a camphene lamp. The deceased resided at No. 122 Suffolk-street, where the Coroner held an inquest yesterday afternoon, and the usual verdict was rendered.

The Irish Demonstration to Wm. Smith O'Brien, Esq.

Meetings of Irish military companies and civic societies were held throughout the City last night for the purpose of perfecting the arrangements projected by the Committee which recently met at the Astor House, and which had for its object to testify towards him the good-will of his friends and countrymen, on the occasion of his departure from these shores. At the Astor House meeting Mr. WM. E. BURNHAM presided, and the fact having been stated that Mr. O'BRIEN had made definite arrangements to leave by the Vigo, on Saturday, a sub-committee was appointed to wait on the other meetings in order to arrive at a mutual understanding by which the display should be made more effective. The sub-committee appointed at a previous meeting to wait on Mr. O'BRIEN, reported through Mr. W. L. COLE, and were further empowered, by resolution, to ask Judge EMMET and request him or, in the event of his being disinclined, to ask JAMES T. ### Police Reports.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY AT THE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.—William H. Kimball was brought before Justice QUACKENBOSS, yesterday, on complaint of William L. Wilson, a student of the Theological Seminary in Ninth-avenue, charged with an attempted burglary upon the room of the former at the Seminary on Saturday last. Mr. Wilson had his door locked. Hearing a rap he did not answer it, and immediately a false key was introduced in the lock and the bolt turned, whereupon he sprang to the door, and on opening it found the prisoner, who hastily retreated. Pursuing the intruder he soon captured him, when the latter stated that he was looking for Professor Finch. Complainant procured the assistance of the Janitor, and the prisoner subsequently took him to the room of Professor Finch, but before reaching there the prisoner broke away from his conductors and ran into the street. He was again pursued by complainant, who, after a race of several blocks, with the assistance of Officer Fisher, recaptured him. Several skeleton keys were found upon his person. The prisoner was committed in default of $500 bail.

TIRED OF HIS WIFE.—A respectable looking Irish woman, giving her name as Catharine Whalen, was found yesterday on board the bark Neptune, on which she said she had been placed by her husband, with a view to get rid of her. AN AGED PICKPOCKET.—A man nearly sixty years old was detected yesterday afternoon at the Fulton Ferry, picking the pocket of a young lady. He was at once arrested and given in charge of an officer, who took him to the City Hall Police Court. He gave his name as James Barnes, and was fully committed for trial at the Special Sessions. He is said to have been recently discharged from the Delaware State Prison.

ROBBING A POLICEMAN'S HOUSE.—A youth having but one eye, and giving his name as John Smith, was discovered yesterday in the house of Officer WELD, No. 276 Tenth-street, helping himself to clothing. Dyspepsia! Dyspepsia!! Dyspepsia!!!
WHAT IS IT? HOW CURED?
Dyspepsia is our National Disease, stomach-feeble digestion, distress after eating, costive habit, bilious condition. How many suffer who it and its attendant symptoms of low spirits, bad taste, coated tongue, obstipated head, and attacks of headache! Yet, how few know how to cure it! Generally, because the bowels are constipated, resort is had to cathartics or laxatives. But such a condition requires no such remedies, whose only office is to weaken the digestion and impair the integrity of the entire assimilative system.
But HUMPHREYS' HOMŒOPATHIC DYSPEPSIA PILLS—a simple medicated sugar pill—have cured hundreds of the worst and most obstinate cases. This is done simply by improving the tone and restoring the integrity of the digestive organs, from which result good appetite, regular habits, a clear head and buoyant spirits. Such a medicine is a gem, and only requires to be known to be appreciated.
Price, 25 cents per box, with directions. Six boxes, $1. R. S.—A full set of HUMPHREYS' HOMŒOPATHIC SPECIFICS, with Book of Directions, and 5 vials, different Remedies, in large vials, morocco case, $5; do. in plain case, $4; family case of 15 boxes and book, $3.
These Remedies, by the single box or case, are sent by mail or express, free of charge, to any address, on receipt of the price. Address
Dr. J. HUMPHREYS & CO.,
No. 562 Broadway, New-York.

Known Effect.—When pain or inflammation is present in a human body, and Brandreth's Pills are used, they act once same upon the humors, which are the cause of the pain or inflammation, and remove them from the body. And they cannot injure because their power is only upon and over those humors or impurities which are unhealthy, (want life,) and whose presence, in a part, cause the pain and burning heat. So in sore throat, croup, colds, cough, rheumatisms, pain in the side and pleurisy, which are all cured by from one to three doses of these Pills, whose power is only exerted to remove impurities from the blood. The highly directed will see them and be cured. Sold at Dr. BRANDRETH'S Office, No. 324 Canal-st.; Burnham's, No. 236 Bowery; and by all Druggists. Price 25 cents a box.

IL POLIUTO.
This opera has just been given at Paris with the great est success.
It is now in active rehearsal at London, but will be there first in New-York, which has now taken a first rank among the musical capitals of the world.
It was in this opera that Mlle. Piccolomini made some of her greatest triumphs in Italy. The subject is the same as that selected by Cornelle for the tragedy of "Polyeucte," in which Rachel was for years in the fourth act of the opera the music and the dramatic situations are equally powerful, and adapted to the grand genius of the great operatic artiste, which Mlle. Piccolomini fully represents.
ANALYSIS OF THE PLOT.
"Il Poliuto" (or, as it is generally called in Italian, "i Martiri.") "The Martyrs," is one of the last works of the gifted composer of "Lucrezia Borgia," "Lucia di Lammermoor," and "La Favorita." It is a grand lyrical tragedy in three acts. The scene is at Rhyloum, the capital of the third century after Christ, when the early Christians were suffering the hatred of the Roman emperors and their ministers, the heathen priesthood, which they bore with divine heroism, the grand and sustained by the faith that was in them. The libretto of "The Martyrs," by Scribe, illustrates the faith, fortitude and constancy of Pauline, a Roman lady, who suffered death rather than deny her faith. The same system is a secret vault, where the Christians have been holding religious service. Polyuto, a Roman youth, who has just become a Christian, is among the worshipers. He describes his affection for his wife Pauline, who is not yet converted, and who, in the same breath, intimates fearful apprehensions for the heathen goddess, Proserpina. Proserpina, revered by her husband, Pauline finds that he follows the new rites, and such is his enthusiasm at at the can hardly restrain him from proclaiming that he is a Christian, in the face of instant death. ### Board of Aldermen.

THE SUPERINTENDENCY OF SANITARY INSPECTION DECLARED ACTING CITY INSPECTOR—ANOTHER NOMINATION FROM THE MAYOR RETURNED TO HIM—SWILL MILK—THE MAYOR'S REPLY TO THE COMMITTEE ON THE CITY INSPECTORSHIP.

Alderman PECK presided over the meeting of the Board of Aldermen last evening in the absence of the President.

Alderman BOGE presented an ordinance amending the ordinance organizing the City Inspector's Department. This ordinance provides that "whenever there shall be a vacancy in the office of City Inspector, or he be prevented by sickness or any other cause from attending to the duties of his office, the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection shall perform the duties of City Inspector during the time such inability, absence, &c., shall exist, and for that purpose shall possess all the powers conferred and perform the duties devolving upon the City Inspector.

Alderman ADAMS moved that it be referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

Alderman BOGE hoped not. This was intended merely to provide for the present state of things. The Courts having decided that Mr. Morton was not City Inspector some one should be charged with the performance of the duties of the office.

Alderman ADAMS was glad that the gentleman had come to his senses with regard to the importance of attending to the duties of the City Inspector. He had had four months to think of it.

The motion to refer was lost. (Ayes, 5; Nays, 10.) Aldermen Adams, Sperry, Darragh, Peck and Seagrist voting in the affirmative.

The ordinance was then passed. (Ayes, 11; Nays, 4.) Alderman PECK this time voting with the majority.

Alderman BOGE offered a resolution directing the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection immediately to proceed to clean the streets under the statutes of the State and ordinances of the Common Council, until the Common Council otherwise ordered.

Alderman BRADLEY offered an amendment providing that he proceed "under the direction of His Honor the Mayor."

Alderman BOGE opposed this.

Alderman DYKES had no desire to act merely to achieve a victory over the Mayor. He was for the amendment. He thought the Board and the people had confidence in the Mayor.

Alderman GIBBS said the Mayor had no supervisory control over the cleaning of the streets, and the assumption was ridiculous.

Alderman BRADLEY desired to fix the responsibility of keeping the streets clean on the Mayor and the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection.

Alderman DARRAGH said there was political patronage in the management of the City Inspector's Department, and he was not for placing it under the Mayor's control.

Alderman BOWMAN claimed that the Board had no right to create a City Inspector.

Alderman BRADLEY's amendment was lost, and Alderman BOGE's resolution was carried—Ayes, 11; Nays, 4.

Alderman BRADLEY protested that the Board had no right to pass such a resolution.

A message was received from the Mayor nominating Noah A. Childs for City Inspector.

Alderman GIBBS expressed his surprise that the Mayor should send in the name of a man identified with the swill-milk interest for City Inspector.

Alderman ADAMS was surprised that the gentleman should object to a gentleman of his own kidney—a gentleman coming from a stump-tailed district.

Alderman TOMLINSON had no objection to Mr. Childs being connected with the Swill-milk business, but he opposed him because the Mayor had not consulted the Board.

Alderman SWAIN said he had visited Mr. Childs's swill-milk stables with the Swill-milk Committee last year. These stables were filthy, and a man who did not institute better sanitary measures in his own cow-stables was not fit to be City Inspector.

Alderman ADAMS moved that the nomination be confirmed. This was lost, (11 to 4.) Aldermen Adams, Hickey, Peck and Sweetser voting in the negative, and a resolution offered by Alderman GIBBS, declaring that the Board did not advise and consent to the appointment of Mr. Childs for City Inspector, was adopted. (Ayes, 9; Nays, 6.)

The following communication was received from the Mayor:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, New-York, May 23, 1859.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

Gentlemen: At the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen a report was made by a select Committee, to whom was referred the nomination of Dr. S. C. Foster for City Inspector. That report concludes with a resolution which was adopted by the Board, that the Board of Aldermen do not advise and consent to the appointment of Dr. S. C. Foster as City Inspector of the City of New-York. Against the doctrine avowed in the report, and the action of the Board thereon, I deem it my duty solemnly to protest.

Intrusted by the electors of the City of New-York with the discharge of the great trust imposed by the charter of the City in the office of Mayor, I should be recreant to my duty if, in silence, I permitted a course to be pursued which is well calculated to nullify in a great measure the executive power of the Mayor. Chosen to my present position by the largest number of votes ever given to a candidate for the office of Chief Magistrate of the City, I have endeavored to exhibit my grateful sense of the kindness of my fellow-citizens, by taking care that the laws are faithfully executed. The people of this City have a right to require from every public officer at least an honest discharge of his duties, and so far as it lies in my power I have determined that the right of the chief executive officer shall be kept as free as all else of their integrity. The allusion in the report of the committee to the political opinions of Dr. Foster, are without precedent in the journals of any Legislature or executive body in the country.

The leading idea which has prompted every nomination has been that indorsed by Mr. Jefferson: "Is he honest, is he capable, is he faithful to the Constitution?" But, at the same time, I have endeavored to conform in my nomination to the wishes of the political party (with which I have always been identified) in whose hands rests the majority of the Board; selections have been made by me of well-known citizens, always identified with the same party to which the majority of the Board claims to belong, and yet they have been rejected without hesitation by the Board. But no matter what may have been the qualifications of my nominee, or the opinions of Dr. Foster, the Board well knew that his name had been withdrawn by me, at Dr. Foster's own request, and that such withdrawal took away from the Board, or its Committee, the right to discuss the propriety of his nomination.

The argument of the Committee that the Mayor might as well withdraw his veto or his approval of an ordinance after he has communicated it to the Common Council, should have no weight, inasmuch as the act of the Mayor in making a nomination, is the exercise of a power differing materially from that which he uses when approving or vetoing an ordinance or resolution. In the case of a nomination he calls into exercise his executive power; whilst in the matter of a veto or approval of a measure, he acts as part of the legislative power under the charter.

Moreover, every citizen, nominated to an office for confirmation by the Board, has, and must have, the right to withdraw his name at any time from the consideration of the Board.

Can it be questioned that if the Chief Executive officer after nominating a person to office should discover his unfitness for this position that he has not the right to withdraw from the confirming body such a nomination?

The journals of the Senate of the United States and of this State will show frequent cases of the withdrawal of names by the nominating officer.

There is another opinion advanced by the Committee to which I deem it my duty carefully to call the attention of the Board. That body demands that it shall be advised and consulted with as regards the propriety of a nomination.

The report says: "There has thence sprung up a grave difference of opinion between your Committee and the Mayor as to his power and duty in the matter."

In the first place the Charter says that the City Inspector "shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen." The Mayor insists that the consent only of the Board is necessary. Your Committee insist that the word "advice" in the statute cannot be thus nullified, but has, and is to have a meaning and force given to it, and that can be done only by the Board being advised with as to the appointment, as well as being required to consent to it.

Under the charter, it is claimed by the present incumbent of the office of Mayor, that the sole and undivided responsibility of selecting the person to fill an office at head of a Department rests with the Mayor, and that the action of the Board of Aldermen is to be confined to a simple affirmation or rejection of the nomination.

By the 10th section of the charter, the exclusive power of the Corporation shall be vested in the Mayor and the Executive Department.

By the 10th section, it is the duty of the Mayor to be vigilant and active in causing the ordinances of the City to be duly executed and enforced, to exercise a constant supervision over the conduct and acts of the executive officers.

By the 18th section the heads of departments with the exception of Comptroller and counsel, shall be appointed by the Mayor with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen. The Board shall have power to confirm or reject all nominations of the Mayor, and in case of a rejection by the Board, the Mayor shall immediately nominate another person. These provisions indicate the intention of the Legislature to clothe the Mayor of this City with full executive power, and to confine the power of the Board to the simple rejection or confirmation. There is, in the language of the 10th section, a difference between the power given to the Mayor of this City and that given under the Constitution of the United States. Whilst the language of the charter is that the Mayor shall appoint, that of the Constitution gives to the President the power to nominate, and, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint. The charter intended that at all times the executive should have the power to select agents to execute the laws and ordinances—to appoint them at once, subject to the approval or rejection of the Board. The executive power of the Mayor is stronger in this respect than that of the President of the United States. The reference which has been made in the report of the Committee to the action of the General Government authorizes me to call the attention of the Board to the opinions given by the most eminent writers on the Constitution, by the law officers of the Union and by the President of the United States. Chancellor Kent, in his Commentaries, speaks of the power of the President's nomination to office, and the acquiescence of the Senate with the President in the exercise of this branch of the Executive power. Kent states that the advice and consent of the Senate, which are required by law to render the nomination effectual, cannot be intended, in the nature of the case, with very mischievous effects. Having no agency in the nomination—nothing but simply consent or refusal, the spirit of personal interest and personal attachment must be pretty much extinguished from a want of means to gratify it."

Judge Story, in his Commentaries, speaking of the power of the Executive to make the selection of public officers, says that "his sole and undivided responsibility will naturally beget a livelier sense of duty." But if a public body should make the appointment, their decisions will be likely to have little to do with the merits of candidates, and much to do with the selfish interests of individuals and cabals. "The Executive," he says further, "will be compelled to consult public opinion, and to vindicate the propriety of his appointments by selections from those whose qualifications are unquestioned and unquestionable. If he should act otherwise, and surrender the public patronage into the hands of profligate men or low adventurers, it will be impossible for him long to retain public favor. Nothing—not even the whole influence of party—could long screen him from the just indignation of the people. Though slow, the ultimate award of public opinion would stamp on his conduct its merited infamy.

Again, he says, referring to the propriety and advantage of a strict adherence to the provisions of the Constitution in the exercise of the appointing power. "The harmony of the two coordinate branches, the independence of the President, the just weight of the Senate, and the useful operation of the power itself, will, no doubt, be best secured by confining each branch to its peculiar functions."

As reference has been made to the political opinions of the majority of the Board, it may not be improper to refer to the doctrines of Andrew Jackson—one whose Democracy will not be questioned by the majority of the Board. As President of the United States, he solemnly protested against the action of the Senate of the United States when that body attempted to invade the rights of the Executive Department of the Government.

General Jackson, in his protest sent to the Senate on April 15, 1834, makes use of the following language: "By the Constitution the Executive power is vested in the President of the United States. Among the duties imposed upon him, and which he is sworn to perform, is that of taking care that the laws be faithfully executed. Being thus made responsible for the entire action of the Executive Department, it was but reasonable that the power of appointing, overseeing and controlling those who execute the laws—a power in its nature executive—should remain in his hands. It is, therefore, not only his right, but the Constitution makes it his duty, to nominate, by and with the consent of the Senate, appoint 'all officers of the United States whose appointments are not in the Constitution otherwise provided for,' and with the proviso that the appointment of inferior officers may be vested in the President alone, in courts of justice or in the heads of departments."

In May, 1812, President Madison nominated a Minister Plenipotentiary to Sweden, assigning his reasons for the measure. The Senate, in the month of June following, passed a resolution requesting a respectful conference with the President on the subject of the nomination; the object of which it is stated to have been to obtain from him the inducements to the measure. The President, however, declined altogether the proposed conference, stating in his message that "the Executive and Senate, in cases of appointment to office and of treaties, are to be considered independent and coordinate with each other. If they agree, the appointments or treaties are made; if the Senate disagree, they fail." (Sergeant on Constitution, page 377.)

Mr. Butler, Attorney-General of the United States under Mr. Van Buren, in an opinion given on March 29, 1837, to the Secretary of the Navy, says, in speaking of appointments to office, that "the constitutional action of the Senate is confined to a simple affirmation or rejection of the President's nomination."

The executive power vested in the Senate is neither that of nomination nor appointing. It is merely a check upon the executive power of appointment. If individuals are proposed for appointment by the President by them deemed incompetent or unworthy, they may withhold their consent, and the appointment cannot be made. They check the action of the Executive, but cannot in relation to these very subjects act themselves or direct him. Selections are still made by the President, and the negative given to the Senate, without diminishing his responsibility, furnishes an additional guarantee to the country that the subordinate executive as well as judicial offices shall be filled with worthy and competent men.

These opinions from that patriot, who, after Washington, enjoyed more of the confidence of the American people than any man who has since lived, will undoubtedly be treated by the majority of the Board as entitled to the highest consideration.

My duty requires that I should defend the rights of the Chief Executive officer of this City, guaranteed to him under the Charter.

Following the example of President Jackson, and using almost the very words of his protest, I shall cause this my protest against the action of the Board of Aldermen to be placed on the files of the Mayor's office.

I have also transmitted to the Board, with a respectful request on my part, that this Message and Protest may be entered at length on the Journal of the Board, to the end that the action of the Board may not hereafter be drawn into precedent with the authority of silent acquiescence on the part of the Executive Department. DANIEL F. TIEMANN, Mayor.

Alderman BOGE moved that the communication be referred to the Select Committee appointed to consider the nomination of Dr. Foster for City Inspector, which had not been discharged.

Alderman SWEENEY moved that the communication be printed in the minutes.

This was lost, (6 to 9,) and the motion of Alderman BOGE prevailed, (9 to 6.)

Alderman GIBBS said every word of the message was a gross insult to the Board.

Some routine business was transacted, and the Board adjourned till Thursday.

Board of Councilmen.

THE RUSS PAVEMENT CONTRACTS—RIGHTS OF GAS COMPANIES—STREET CLEANING—DEAD-HOUSES, &C.

The Board met at the usual hour yesterday afternoon, President CORNELL in the Chair.

Mr. Charles Guidet sent in a lengthy petition with reference to the substitution of Belgian for the Russ pavement in Broadway. He asked that the resolution with reference to repairing that street be referred to the Croton Aqueduct Board, with direction to advertise for proposals. Should this action not be taken by the Board, Mr. G. proposes to take up the Russ pavement between the Battery and Fourteenth street and substitute the Belgian pavement therefor, at a rate not to exceed $1 18 per square yard, the stone taken up to become the property of the petitioner. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The report of the Committee on Streets, recommending a concurrence with the Board of Aldermen in awarding the contract for the improvement of the Russ pavement in Broadway to C. G. Waterbury, was submitted and laid over.

In answer to a resolution of inquiry, Mr. Busteed, the Counsel for the Corporation, stated that the Manhattan Gas Company had no power to prescribe the size or quality of pipe which consumers may use in introducing gas into their dwellings, nor to designate the number of burners which shall be used for any diameter of pipe. Any person is at liberty to exercise his own judgment in such matters, and to refuse the benefits of such corporation as the Manhattan Gas Company. Mr. Busteed further stated that the Company may legally charge for the service-pipe which is used in conducting the gas from the main pipe into any dwelling or store. Two hundred copies of the communication were ordered to be printed.

Alderman BOGE's proposition that the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection take charge of the City Inspector's Department, was referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

A resolution, offered by the same gentleman, directing the same official to proceed with the work of cleaning the streets, was referred to the appropriate Committee.

Several appropriations were made, for the benefit of parties who claimed that their horses had been lost from piers, on account of the carelessness of the City authorities, in keeping the piers in repair. Councilman PLATT stated that Messrs. Smith Brothers, dealers in manure, who claim $125 as remuneration for the loss of an animal which belonged to them, were in the habit of backing horses off piers and claiming four or five times their value. He moved that $125 be stricken out, and $25 inserted. The motion was carried after debate.

A large number of General Orders, of no public interest, were acted on, and the Board adjourned.

THE FINE WEATHER.—Nothing could have cheered the drooping spirits of the resident and chance population of New-York and vicinity, so much as the beautiful weather of yesterday. It set everybody at work to prepare for a trip to Europe or some fashionable watering-place. And by the way, we have understood that one of the principal features of these preparations was the procuring of life-saving and elegant articles of clothing from the Delano Life-Preserving Coat and Vest Company, No. 256 Broadway. People are getting tired of being subjected to the danger of drowning, a danger which these garments obviate to an extent that renders death by water impossible. Everybody should have one of the safety bathing dresses sold by this Company. Neither man, woman nor child should be without one for the Summer season.

The Weekly Averages of the Banks of the City of New-York, on Saturday, May 21, 1859, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous exhibit of May 14:

The Specie line is very satisfactory after the heavy export movement of last week. To send to Europe $2,923,000, and then have the Banks come out with $918,000 more than on the previous Average argues much heavier as well as readier resources from the interior than most parties on the Street have given the country credit for. The resulting average this afternoon goes ahead of the estimate made in our weekly review this morning. We find on further inquiry that the daily receipts of coin by express embrace a large number of $5,000 @$20,000 parcels, in addition to the larger sums from Philadelphia, Baltimore, &c. To-day the opinion is current that the exchange against New-Orleans will soon give New-York from four to six millions in Gold and Silver. Although the authority for this is found with two or three of the oldest Bankers in the Street connected with the European and Southern Exchanges, we are not quite sure of so large an aggregate. It is quite certain, however, that the bulk of our recent Dry Goods and other importations, for which, under the war disturbance, we are now rapidly remitting to Europe, has been taken by the South and Southwest, and that no section of the country is more able to pay for these goods in Bullion, if need be. The present Bank average of Specie is a falling one so far as the new week is concerned, as the heaviest shipments went out only on Saturday last. The export demand this week will embrace at least $2,500,000 for the favorite steamer on Wednesday, and perhaps $1,000,000 for the Arago on Saturday. These sums will absorb the $2,000,000 nearly due from California, and $1,500,000 from the interior and the Sub-Treasury, all which will be readily supplied. The Sub-Treasury to-day disburses $303,000 in excess of the Customs, which are liberal in amount, say $174,000. The balance this afternoon is $5,185,364. Philadelphia continues debtor to New-York, and is the more able to pay, as her receipts from the West must be considerable. These calculations in reference to our Specie resources, however, might be questionable but for the reduction, almost wholly involuntary, shown on the line of Bank Discounts. The curtailment is nearly a million of dollars, and at anything like this weekly retrogression, the Bank movement is in no danger of exciting distrust; especially as the impression already obtains that the present week will end the very heavy shipments of Specie. In this connection, it is not too much to say that the American market will have vindicated its strength, in time of European trouble, by promptly contributing nearly, or quite, eighteen million dollars in eight weeks in Bullion to the liquidation of indebtedness abroad, leaving the New-York bank reserve as strong as at the close of the month of March. The Deposit line on the statement to-day shows that balances and collections from the interior accumulate, or fall in, as rapidly as the remittances to Europe go out, and the Discount column is paid off.

To-day the market for Money is quiet. Discounts range at 6@7 ⅌ cent., and demand and short loans, 5@6 ⅌ cent. The Stock Brokers, who are not heavy borrowers, are readily supplied at 5 ⅌ cent., subject to call, without notice. There is a fair offering of first-class paper, within 60 days, at 6 ⅌ cent., and longer dates, 7 ⅌ cent. The Exchanges on England are easier, Merchant bills, drawn here, are done at from 109 to 109⅛; some Southern bills, with bank indorsements, at 109¼@109⅜; standard bankers, 110@110⅛ ⅌ cent. All these figures for 60 days sight. The sight rate is 110⅛ ⅌ cent. The Continental exchanges are very irregular, conforming, in most cases, to London, which is the favorite remittance.

The Stock Market for the present week opened rather tame, except on New-York Central shares, which are speculated in with marked spirit, and underwent repeated change of price in the course of the day. The bulk of the sales at the early Board were at 71⅞ ⅌ cent., a decline of ⅜@½ ⅌ cent from the closing sales of Saturday. Subsequently, on the Street the stock rose to 71⅞@⅞@72@72¼ ⅌ cent., the certificates being scarce for delivery. At the Second Board the cash price ruled 72¼@½, while sellers' options were put out at 71¾@¾ ⅌ cent., the former closing 72@72¼, as on Saturday. We referred this morning to a rumor on Saturday that the April business amounted to only $443,500, remarking that no authentic statement had appeared in the Albany papers. It is stated on the Street to-day that the rumor in question, which was adopted by several of our neighbors as authentic, is not exact, and that the Treasurer's statement will appear in the Albany papers to-day or to-morrow. The State Stocks were steady to-day, and Missouris firmer at the close, selling at 83¼ ⅌ cent.; Tennessees 80¼@80½, and Virginias 96 ⅌ cent. Thompson's Reporter of this week states on official authority that no Missouris are being withdrawn from the Bank Department of Wisconsin, but that, on the contrary, the deposits are on the increase, the same being the case in Illinois. It was the apprehension of Western supplies of the stock that contributed in part to the recent decline. The Government Fives of 1874 are rather steadier, 104@104¼ ⅌ cent. Illinois Central Bonds steady at 76 ⅌ cent. The Western Railroad shares are a fraction better this afternoon than on Saturday. Galena sold at 63¾; Michigan Central was bid for at 42½, and Rock Island cash stock 62¾, while sellers' options were done at 62@60 ⅌ cent. Toledo firm at 27½. In Pacific Mail the business was mostly at 72¾ ⅌ cent, ex-dividend. Panama 118, no sales. Delaware 94. The general market left off steady, although the majority of the bidders still incline to bear Stocks.

The thirteen steamers have been maintained in complete repair, and the report states that all except three have been actually employed in the Panama and San Francisco and San Francisco and Oregon trades. One of the remaining three, the St. Louis, has been occasionally employed between New-York and Aspinwall.

The Chicago and Burlington traffic for April is reported at $124,378, against $131,348 same month last year.

The Cumberland Coal Company have advice to-day that the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal is again in navigable condition for loaded coal boats
